CASPER in HISTORY

One question we get very often here at Harvey is, "How old is Casper?" Well, Casper was first spotted around these offices nearly fifty years ago and that has been the official story ever since. But now, Professor Sidney Von Jacobson, the noted historian and authority on most things that combine mystery and fun, has come up with some startling discoveries: photos that suggest, no—prove, that Casper has actually been around a lot longer than that. Even more importantly, he's been part of history, a sightseer along on some of the most memorable adventures of the last one hundred years.

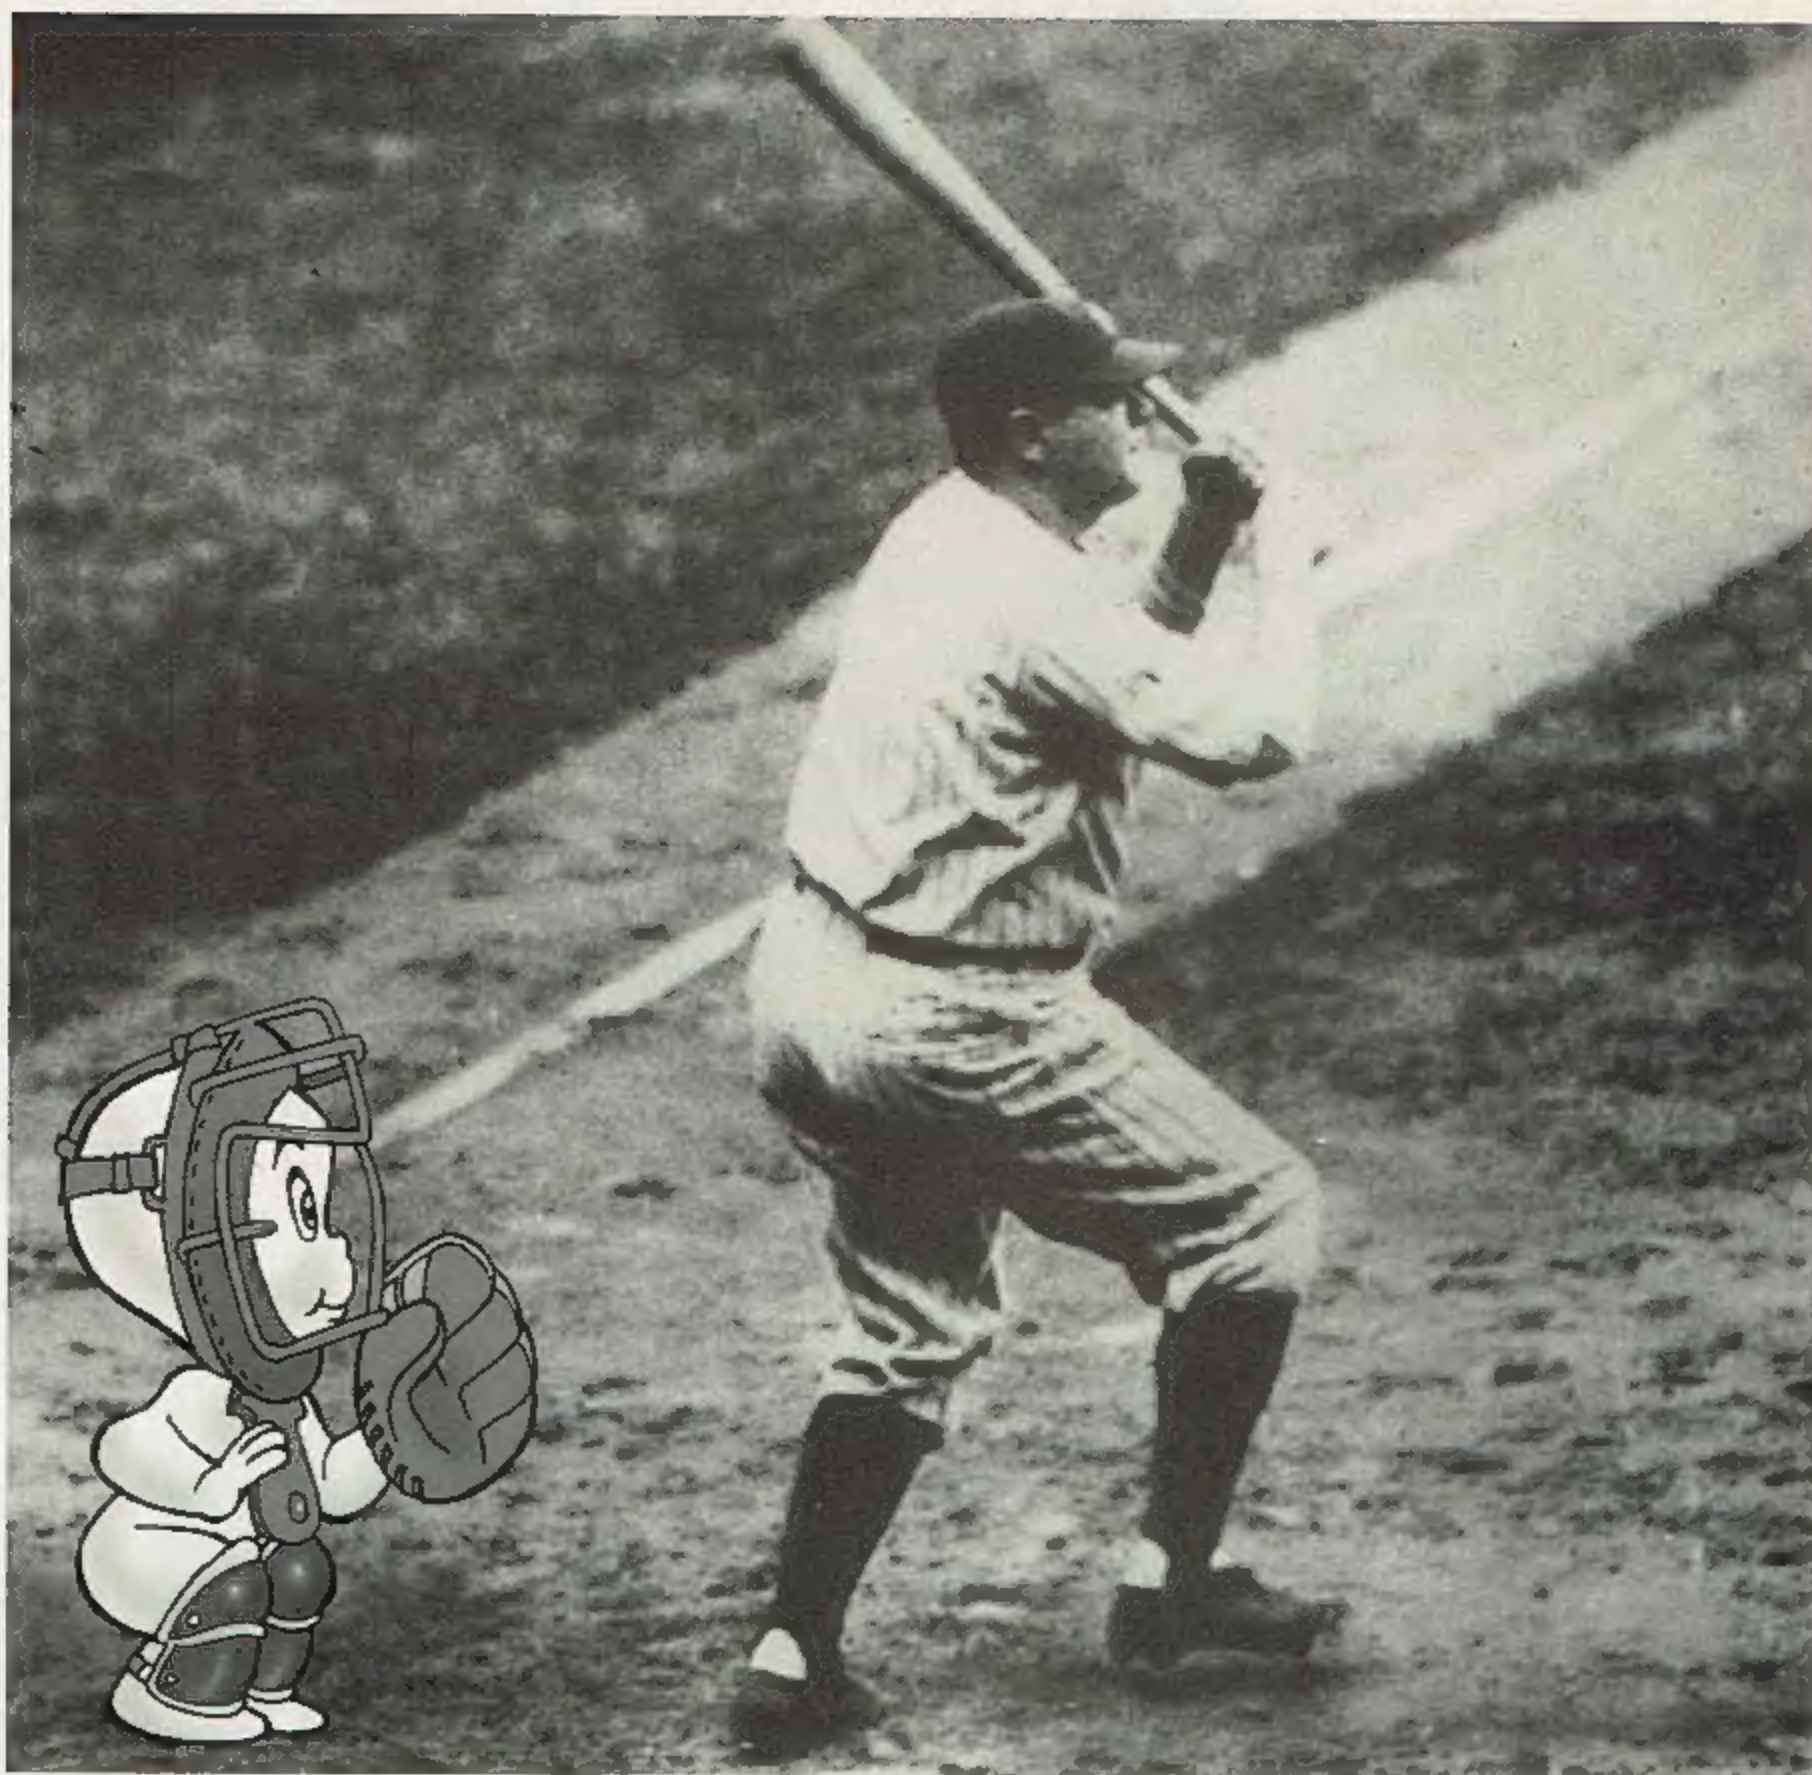

May 21, 1927

Charles Lindbergh was the first person to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean. His little plane, "The Spirit of St. Louis," flew from New York to Paris, a distance of 3,600 miles. The flight took 33 1/2 hours, so he was traveling more than 100 miles an hour. Today, the Concord, which flies at 1,350 miles an hour, or twice the speed of sound, makes the trip in less than four hours. Lindbergh was alone on his historic journey—or was he?

Sept. 30, 1927

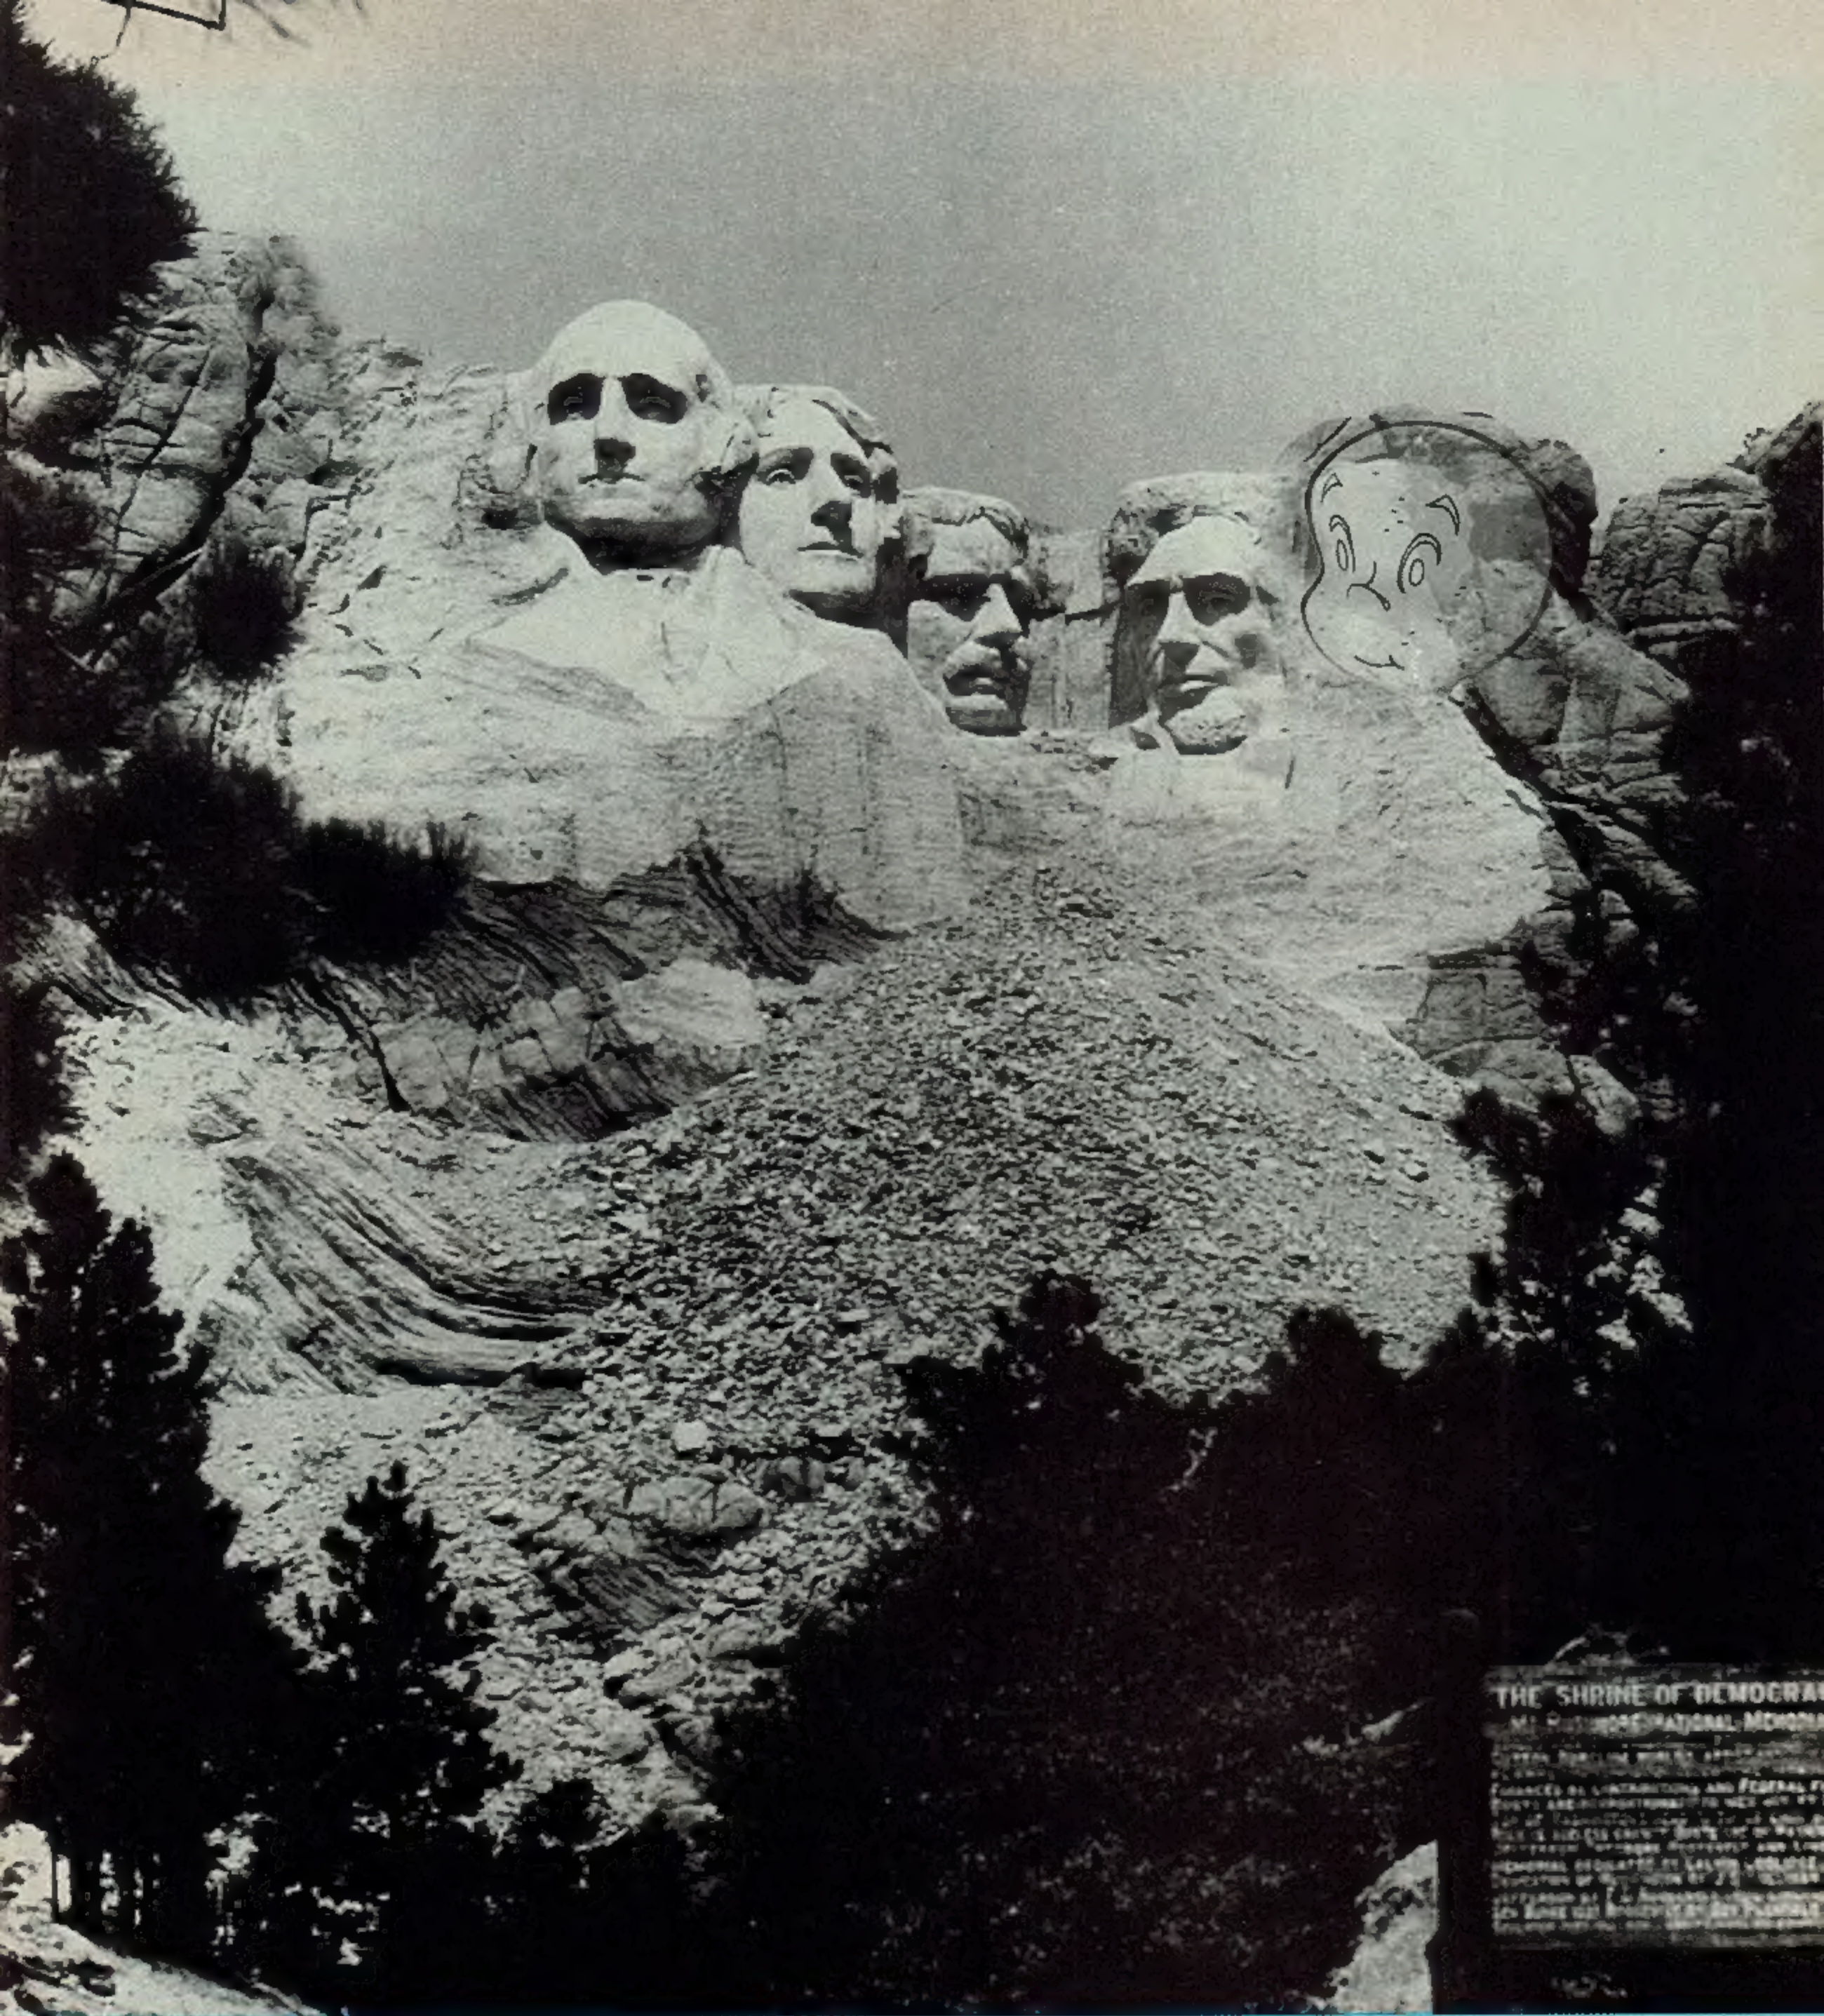

Four months and three days after the Lindbergh-Casper flight, Casper was again in on history.

This time, he was behind the plate when Babe Ruth hit his 60th home run, a record not to be broken for seventy-one years.

Dec. 21, 1937

Casper's first starring role in a major movie didn't come until Universal's Casper, released in 1995. But—and the Disney people won't admit this—Casper actually was in their first full-length animated film, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. See for yourself. His character, by the way, was called "Scary," which, of course, he isn't.

Nov. 1, 1941

A famous sight to see in America is Mt. Rushmore in the Black Hills of South Dakota. Completed on that date, the faces of four great American presidents, George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt were "carved" (actually drilled and dynamited) into the side of the mountain. For a while, a mysterious fifth face also appeared, but has long since vanished. Ghosts can do that, you know.

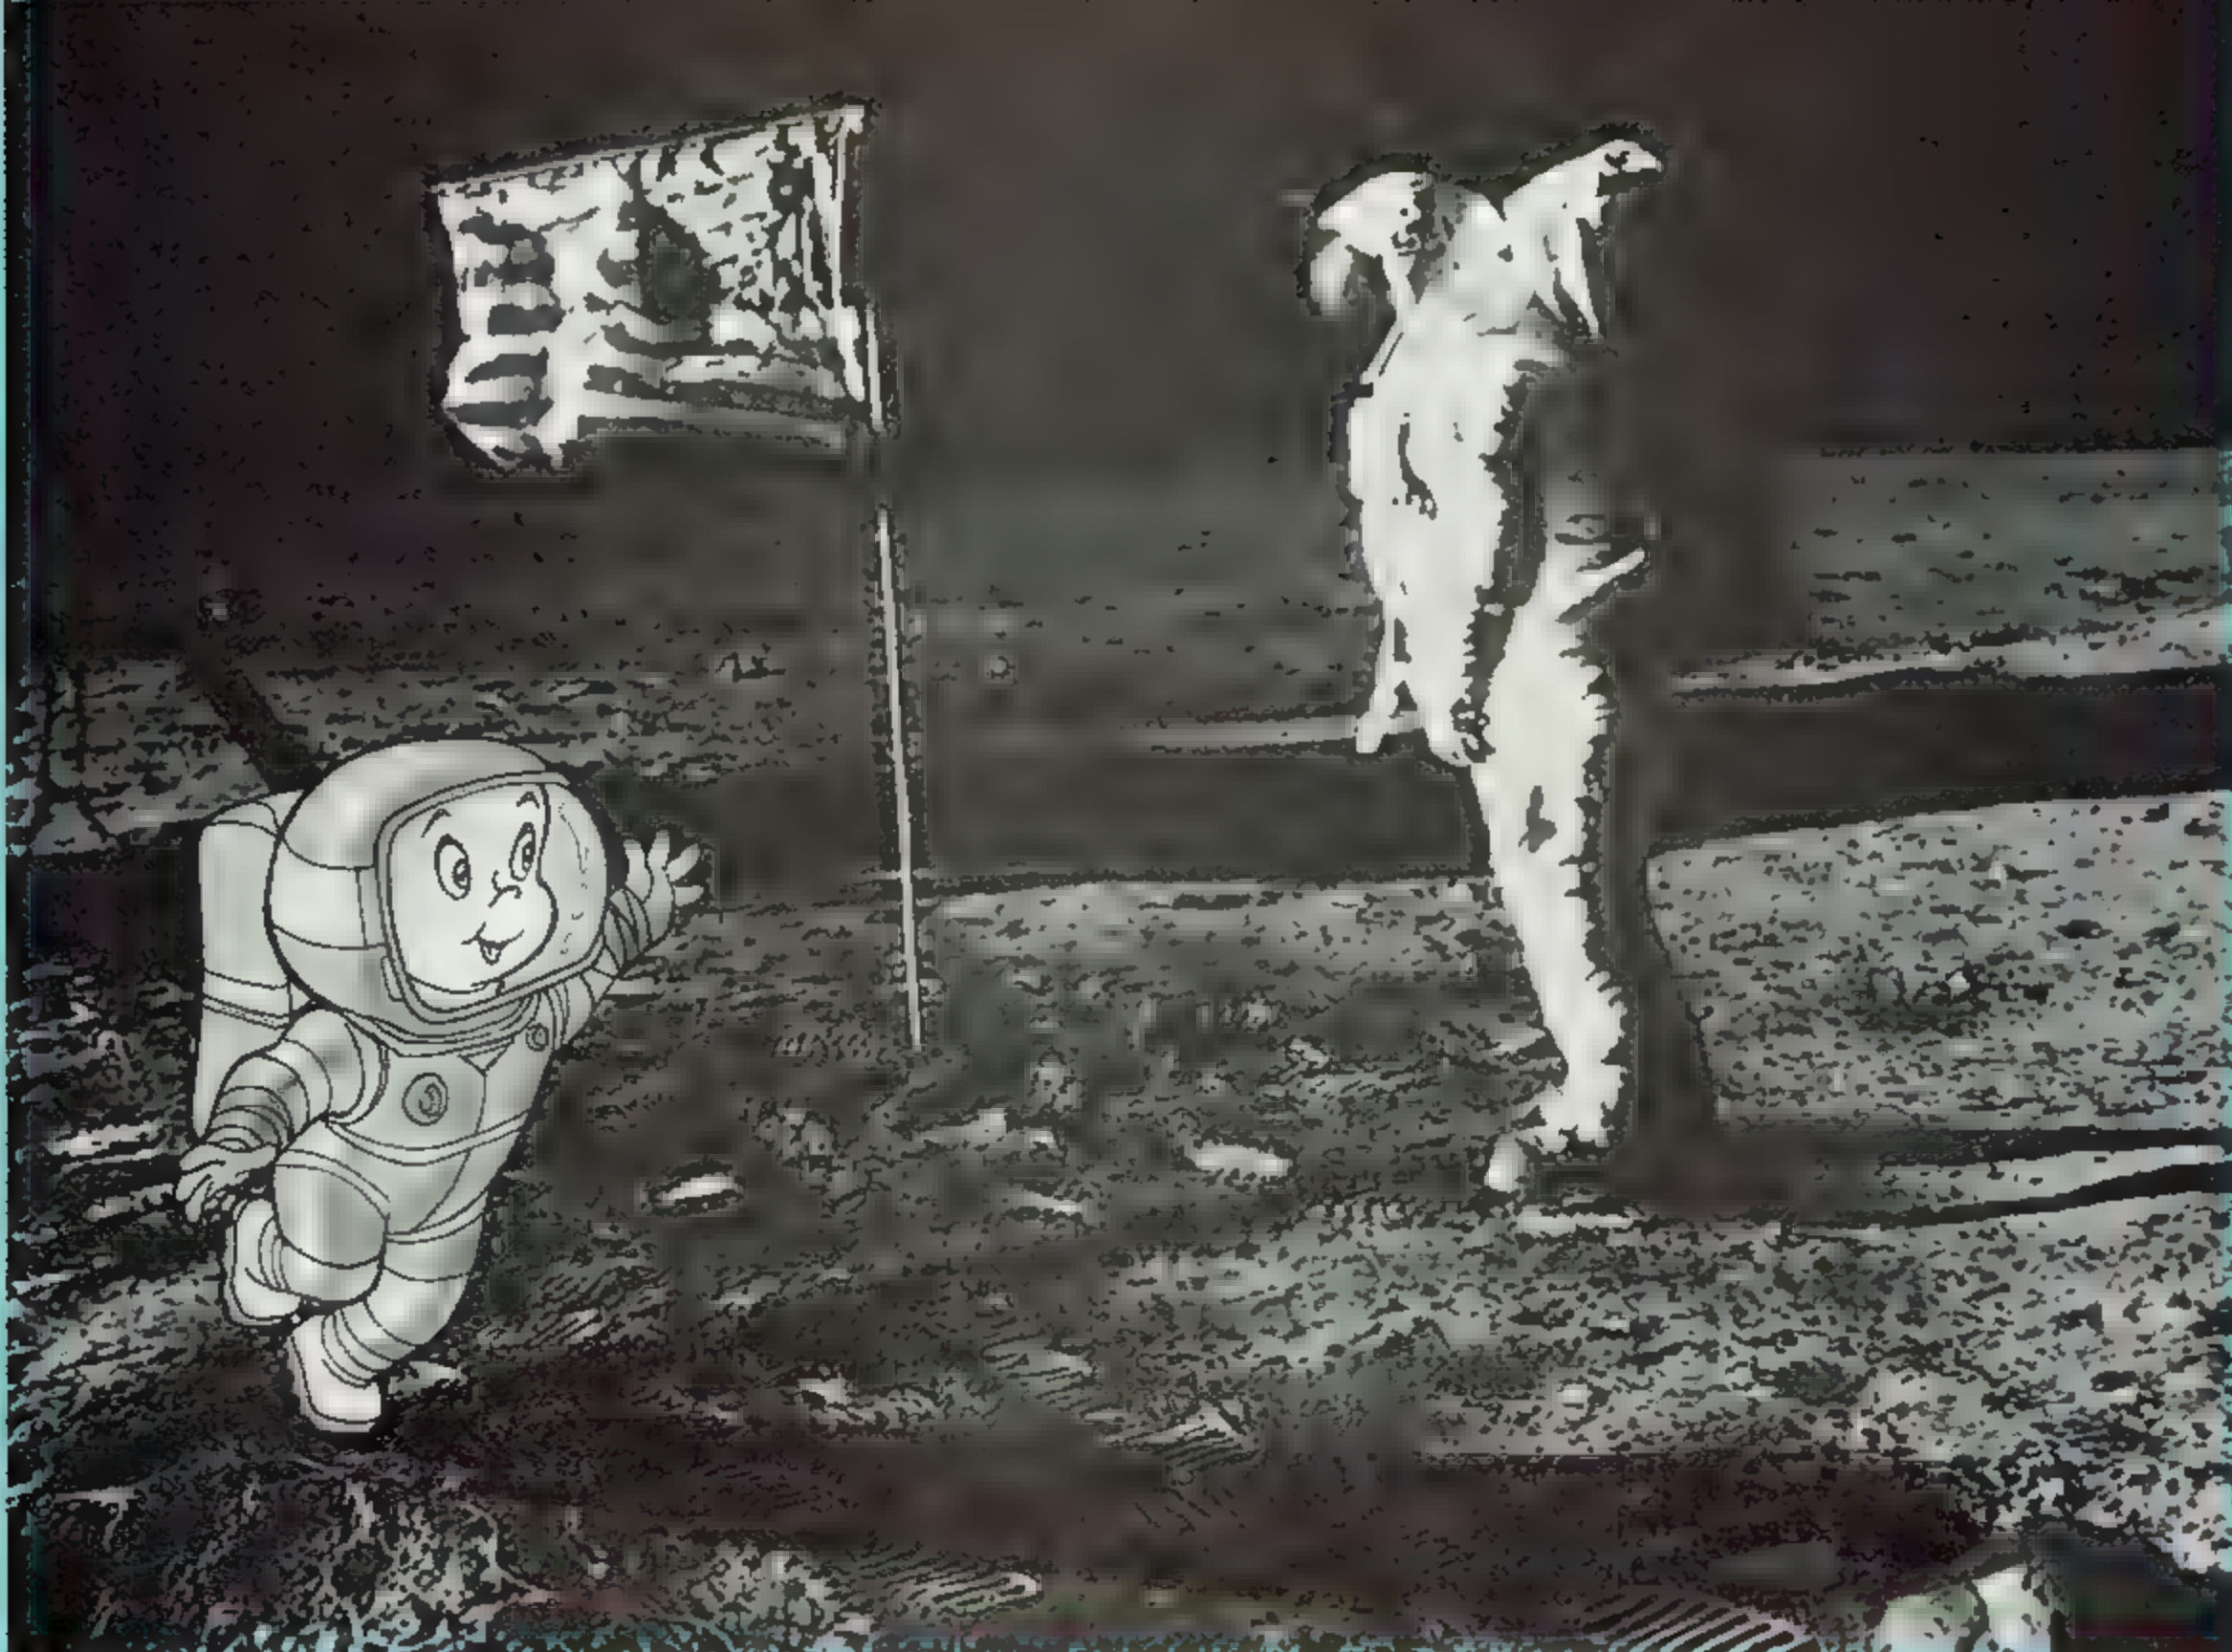

Sept. 19, 1956

One of the great stars of all time was Elvis Presley, who became instantly famous when he appeared on television on this date. Two years earlier, Elvis had been a truck driver. Now, his records and concerts and movies are incredibly popular. Of course, many people said that one reason Elvis was so good was his band, particularly the drummer.

Feb. 10, 1964

The Beatles were very probably your mom and dad's favorite musical group. They were more popular than the Spice Girls and the Backstreet Boys put together. On this date they came to America from England—their native country—and they were mobbed by fans who loved their music and by newspaper and television people. The first thing they did when they arrived here was speak to the press. For some strange reason, it was never reported that in addition to John, Paul, George and Ringo, there was a fifth Beatle.

July 24, 1969

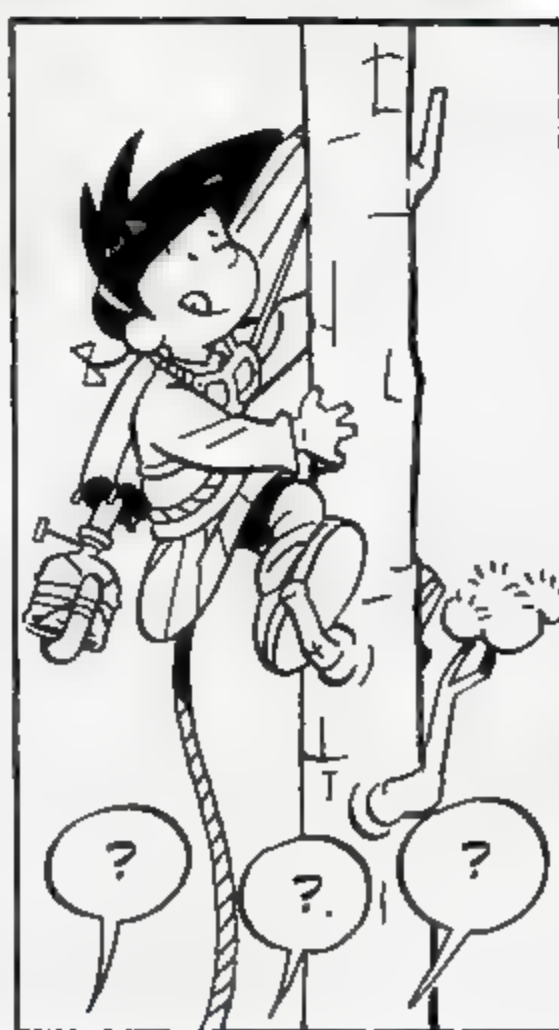

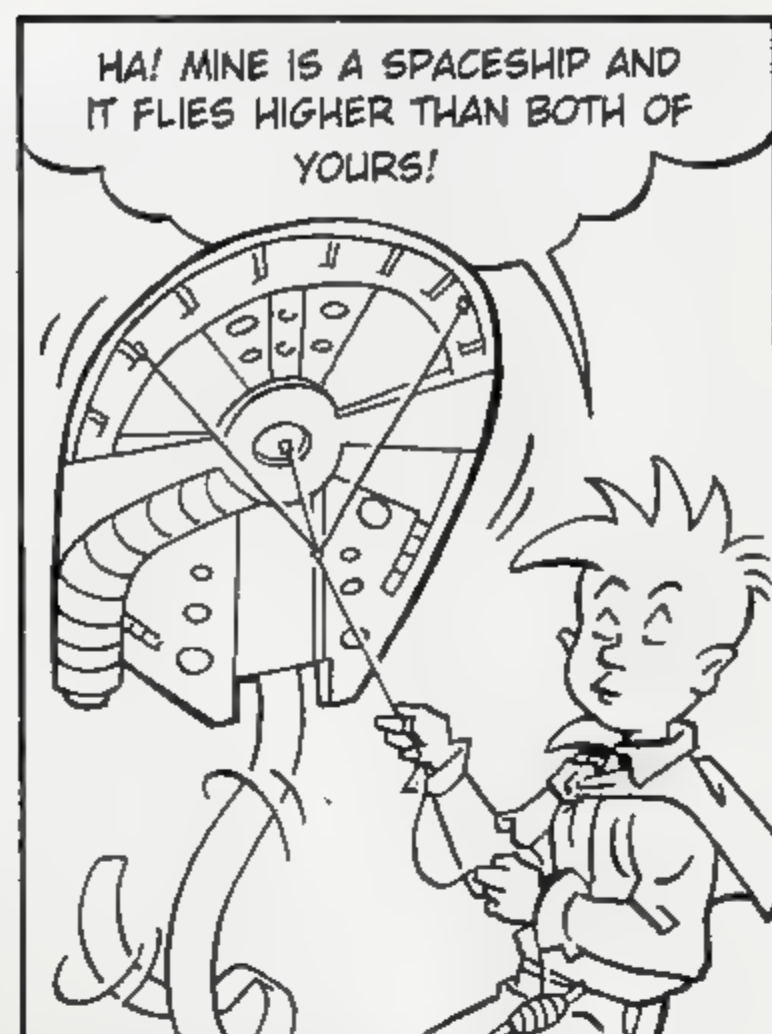

"That's one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind." Astronaut Neil Armstrong said that when he became the first person to put a foot on the moon. Or was he? A very, very, very powerful camera suggests that someone else was there before him.

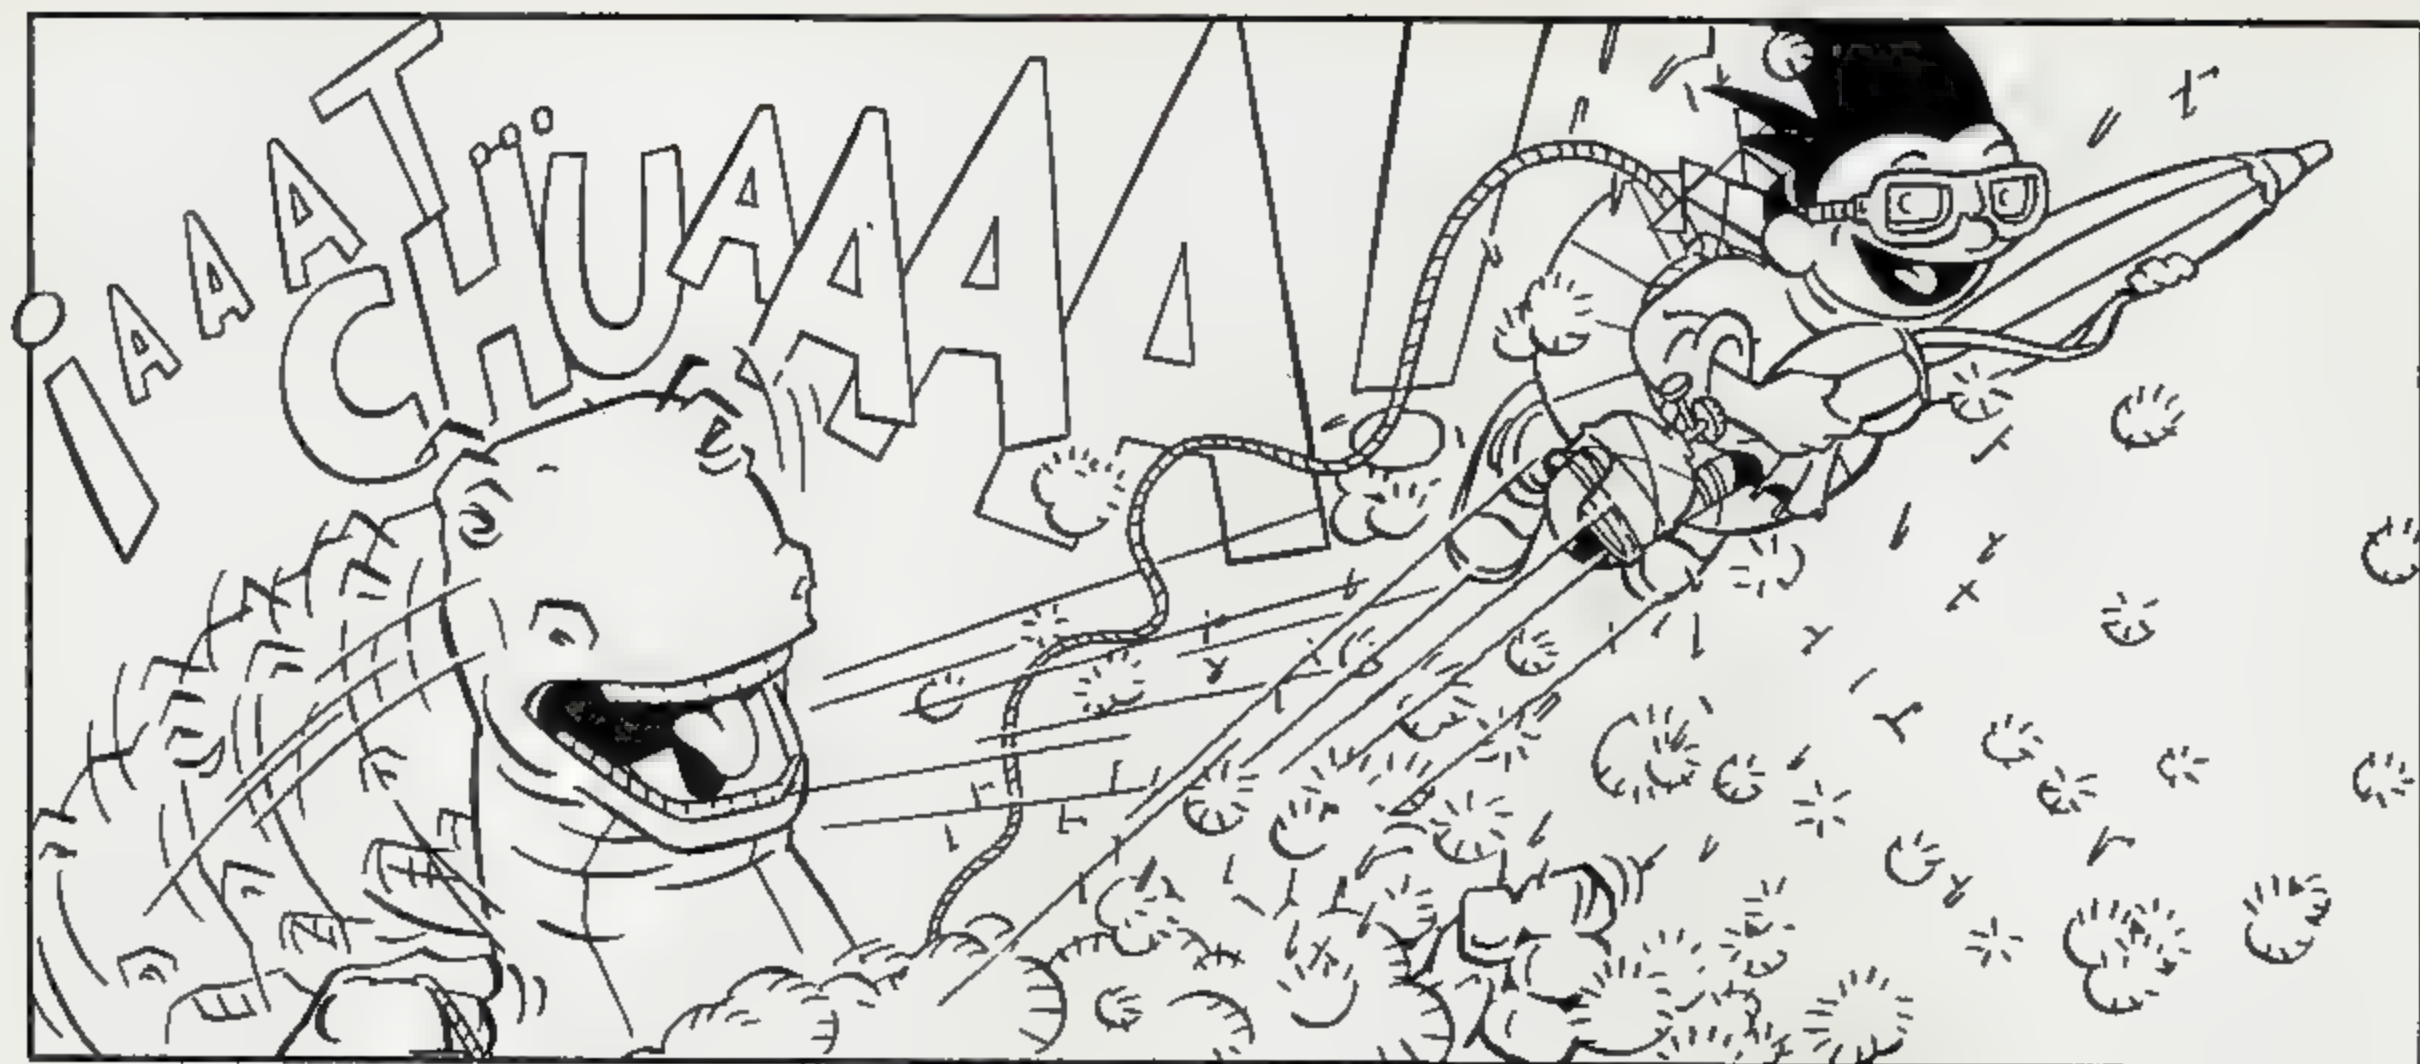

Sept. 27, 1998

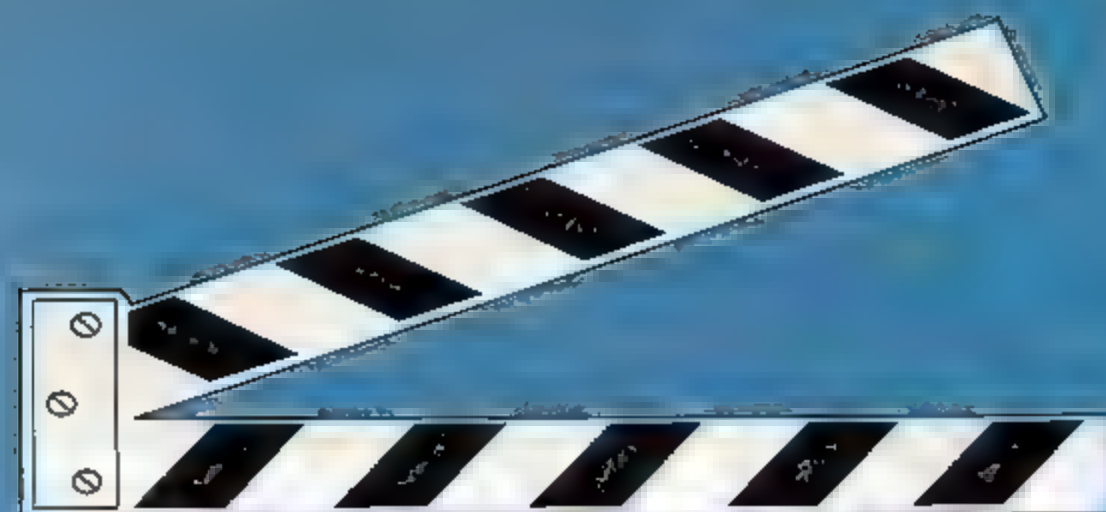

Once again, a home run record is broken and once again Casper is on hand, this time as a spectator behind home plate as Mark McGwire hit home run number 70, beating Babe Ruth by ten.

Casper is quick to point out that he was not there on April 8, 1974 when Hank Aaron hit his record 715th home run, breaking Ruth's lifetime record.

DIARY OF A STAR

MICHAEL ANGARANO'S DAY-TO-DAY
ADVENTURES ON THE SET OF
BABY HUEY'S GREAT EASTER ADVENTURE.

LIGHTS! CAMERAS! ACTION!

August 10, 1998

Well, this was my first day of filming the movie, Baby Huey's Great Easter Adventure. I was very excited. I met the director Stephen Furst and the producer Matty Simmons. I did about five scenes today. Also met the other kids in the movie. Today, I saw Baby Huey, too. Also, when I was in school, I learned to work a yoyo. Well, that's all for today.

August 11, 1998

Today's Tuesday, the second day on the job. It was maybe 100°, but we got through it. We did one really big dance scene in a classroom. I have to flip across the room and do a split! That's pretty tiring. The scene ends with the principal coming in and everyone in the room freezes and I freeze in a split! My Mom's happy, too. She finished a 500-page book.

August 12, 1998

Today's Wednesday and we did the egg painting scenes. This is quite an important scene. It's when my attitude changes from shy to not too shy. It's like I lack in self-confidence and all of a sudden I just realize I should just go for it! My older sister got to work on her first movie today. My younger sister, Erica, is gonna be in a scene, too. That's it for now!

August 13, 1998

Today is Thursday, and probably the best day so far! It was another heat wave as usual. Today was the gym scene. This scene is pretty funny! Huey walks over to a bunch of us climbing on ropes and working out. Audrey tells Huey to climb. So, he does and the roof collapses! The way they did it was there was a box attached to the top end of the rope and a little weight opens it with styrofoam rocks! The sound effects people made a very loud KABOOM! to make it sound real. I got a black eye today-I mean it was painted on by one of the make-up people!

 It's so believable, I have to make up a good story about how I got it!

August 14, 1998

I really have nothing to say about today. But it was a very long, hot day!

August 17, 1998

Second week on the job! I met my fake mommy and daddy. My mom is Marsha from "The Brady Bunch." My dad is Joe Isuzu from TV commercials.

August 18, 1998

Today was a big dance scene; it was like the big finale. The whole cast was in it. So, I got to meet everyone. Boy, was it exciting and exhausting!

August 19, 1998

Today I did the scenes when Professor von Klupp falls out of a tree. It was pretty funny because he landed on boxes. We also did a scene when I'm telling the kids to do all these things and from the sky where it's shot from I say, "Let's go!" and all the kids scatter like ants.

August 20, 1998

My cousin and grandmother came today. We did all the scenes when Huey and I are walking through the town. I got a yoyo in one of the stores and now I can do all kinds of tricks with it! I got good baseball cards, too.

August 21, 1998

Today was an easy day. I worked through lunch. I finally met P.J. Wynsocki who is played by the famous actor, Joseph Bologna. He's funny!

August 24, 1998

Today was so much fun. It was at the baseball field. In between the scenes I had a catch with this guy named Steve. We made so many diving catches that my arm hurts.

August 25, 1998

Today was very, very hot! We shot on location in the woods. We had to watch out for snakes, too. Yuucck! The girl who played Lotta in the movie finished up today. That was the sad part of the day.

August 26, 1998

Today was the first day at Dead Man's Gulch. It was pretty cool, but it was very hot, if you know what I mean. About 100° out. This Dead Man's Gulch, is about a 300-foot drop! I had to kneel by the edge and look all the way down.

August 27, 1998

I did three stunt jobs today. Remember Dead Man's Gulch? Well, I was lifted about 25 feet over it! I was harnessed and lifted up on a crane. The other two stunts I had to do were where I hung off a tree and then I had to go on a 10-foot platform and look all the way down the gulch!

August 28, 1998

Today we worked at the studio instead of on location. There was a funny scene where Baby Huey and I are having a pillow fight. I keep hitting him in the stomach and he doesn't move. I say, "You're supposed to hit me," and when he does, I go flying.

August 31, 1998

The scene we did today was Huey and I sleeping in a bunk bed. The funny part is when he's climbing the ladder to the top of the bunk, the ladder collapses. Once we get him up on top of the bunk, it collapses as well. P.S. There is only one more day of shooting this movie. I am very sad.

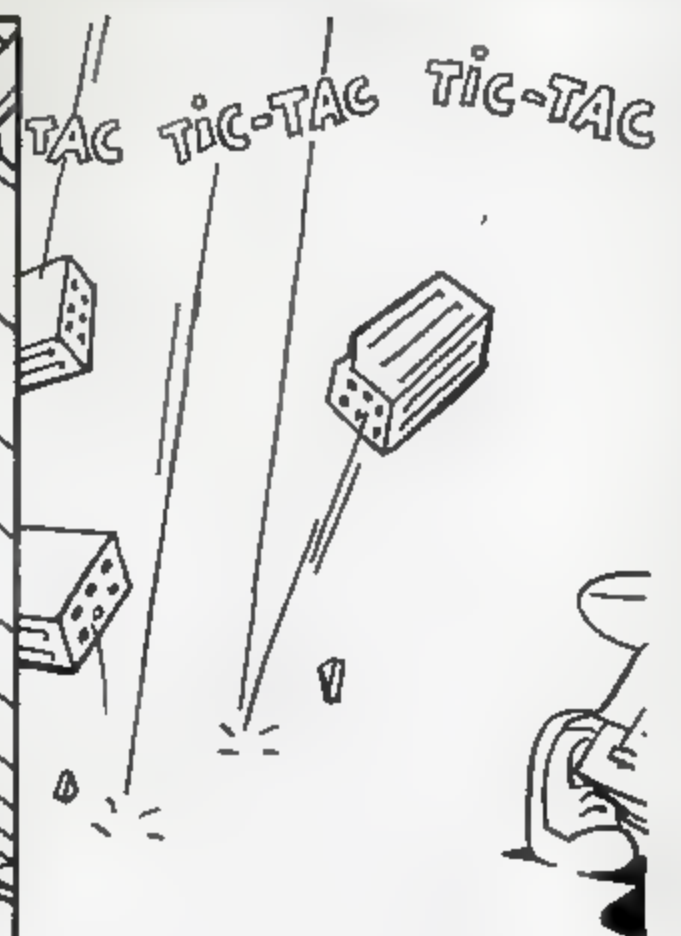

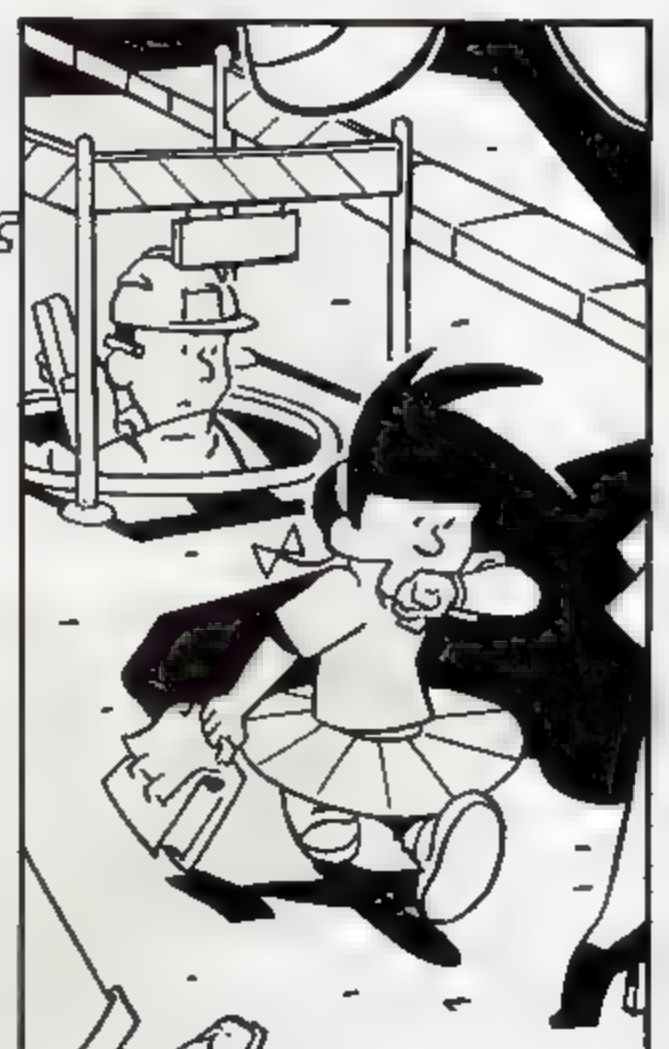

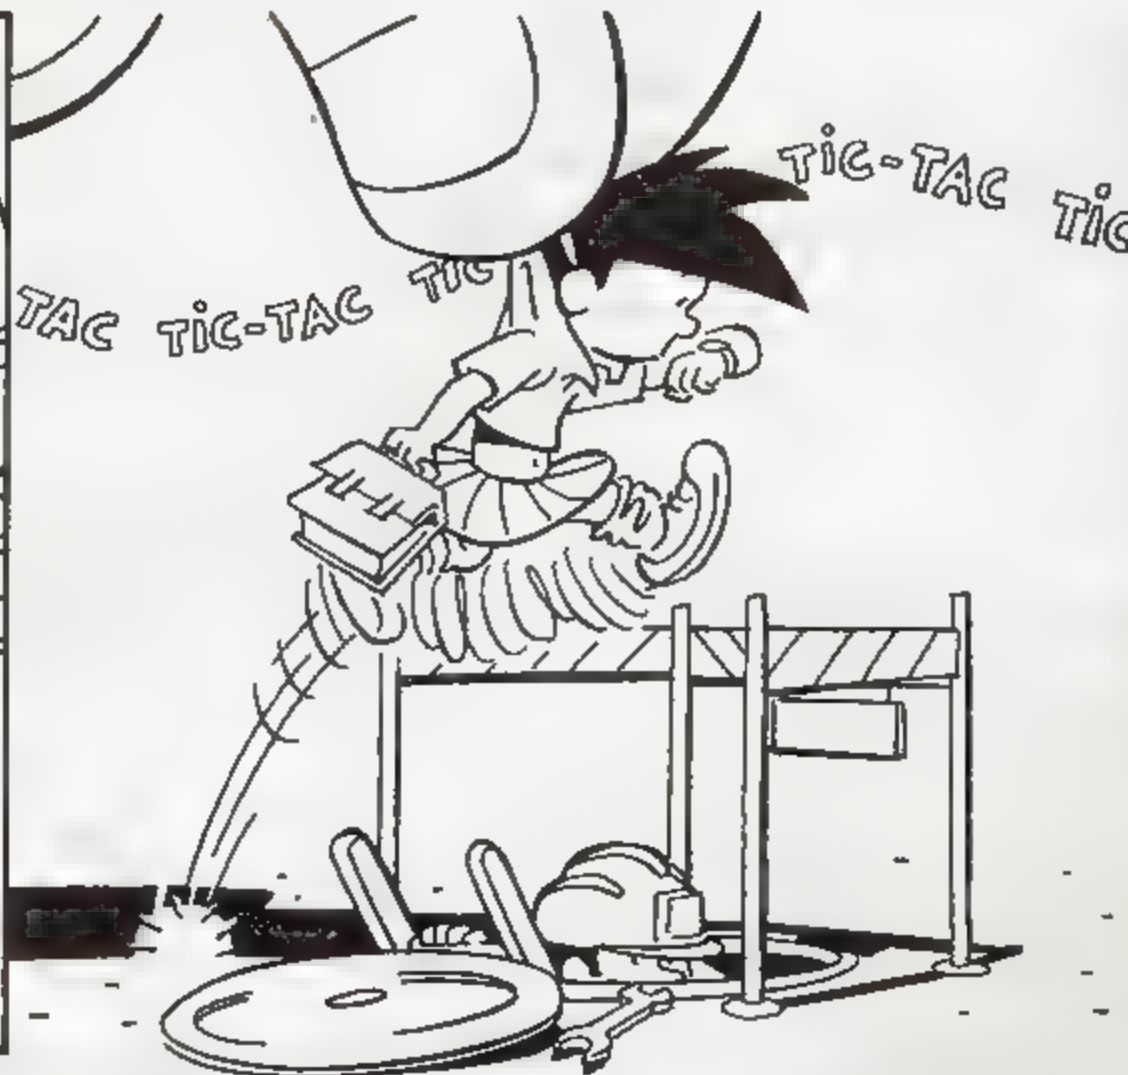

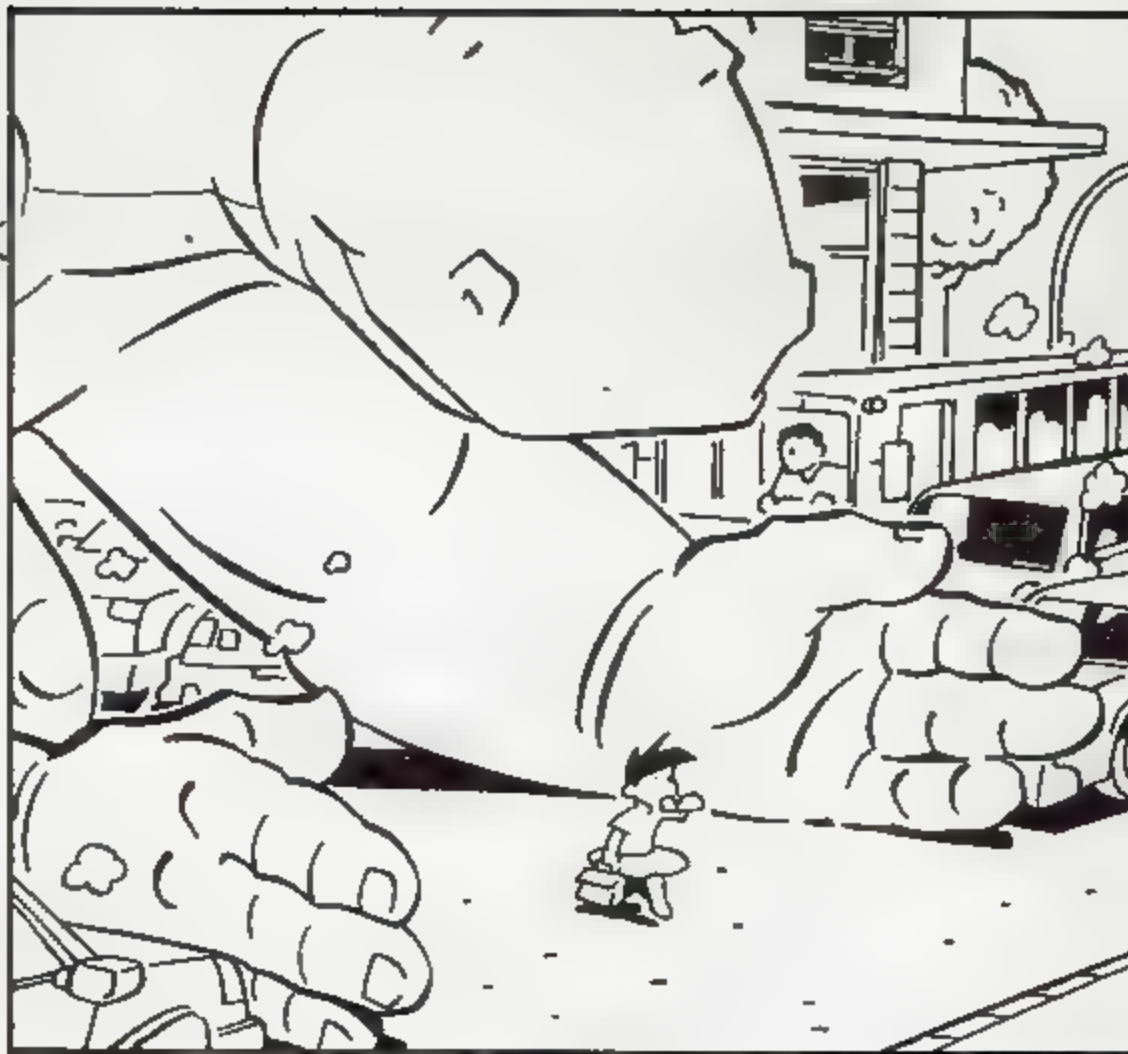

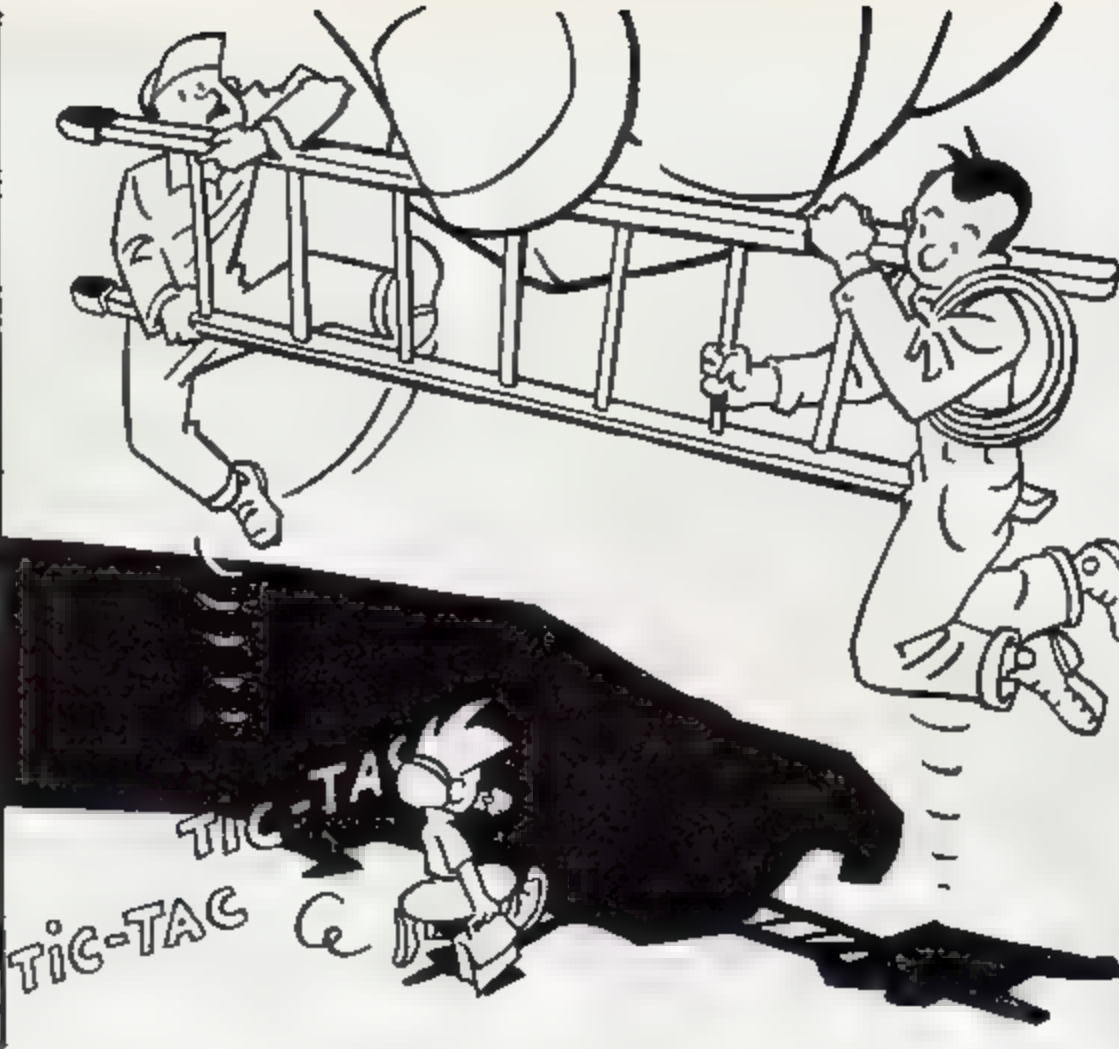

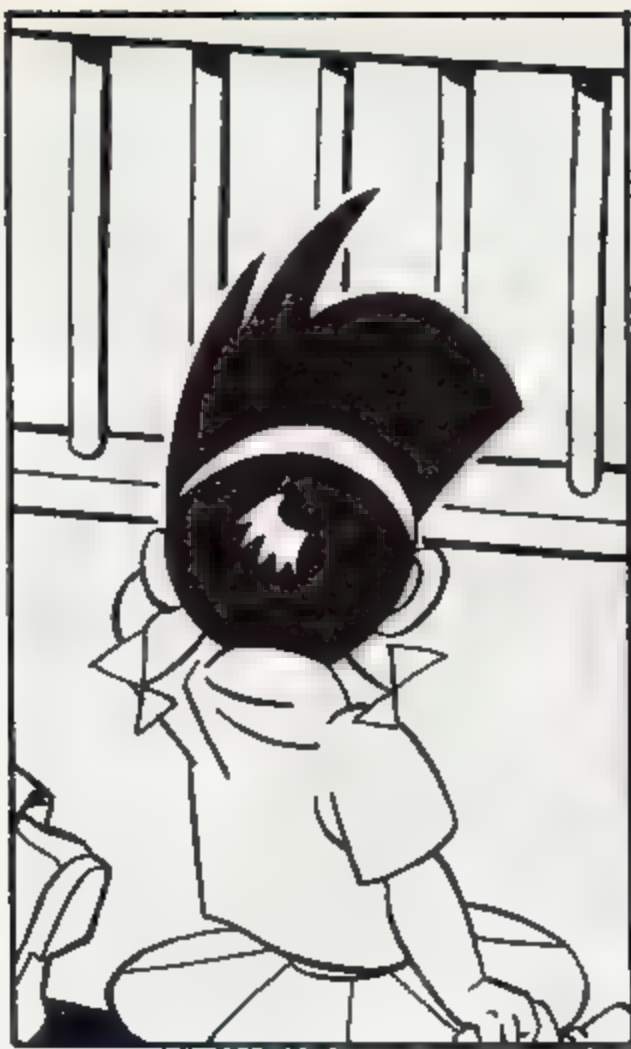

September 1, 1998

Well, today is the last day of filming. Everybody says the film is looking great! The final scene we shot today was Maureen, David, Huey and I at the kitchen table. When we were finished, Stephen said, "There comes a sad time in every movie, and this is our sad time, because Michael Angarano has just completed his last scene. Michael, the boy, is wrapped!" Everyone started clapping. It was both happy and sad. My mom and dad were waiting for me to walk off the set. They hugged me and I think mom was crying because she was so proud of me. She said dad was, too.

I will go home to New York on Friday, but I will miss everyone very much. Baby Huey was great fun and I met the best people. Rodger Bumpass, Huey, was the greatest. He worked so hard every day in very hot weather and in a duck suit! I loved doing Baby Huey. Well, that's a wrap from "Michael, the Boy!"

THE COMPLETELY HOMEMADE ADVENTURES OF 2 Twins Named

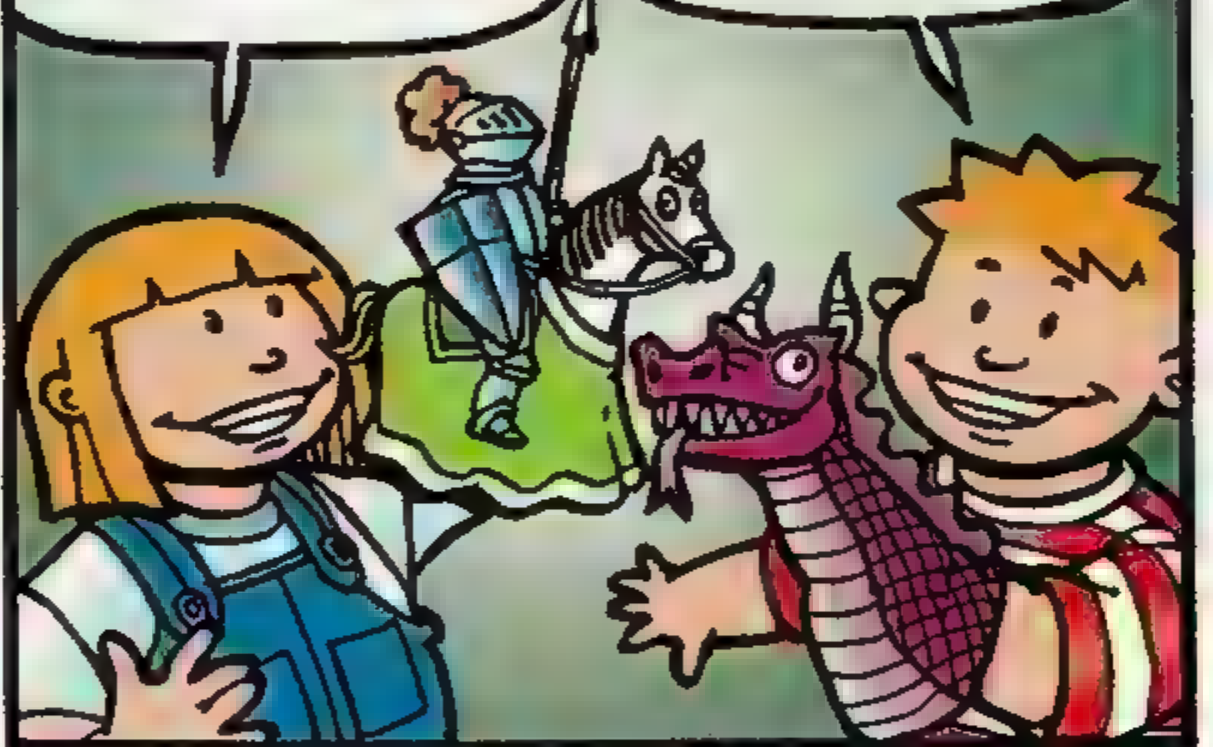

THE DAY BEGAN WITH MAX AND MAX'S NOT-SO-GOOD FRIEND, VICTOR GETTING READY TO PUT ON A PUPPET SHOW.

OH, MAX... AND YOU, TOO, MAX... WOULD YOU CARE TO HELP ME WITH MY SHOW?

SURE! DO I GET TO PLAY THE KNIGHT?

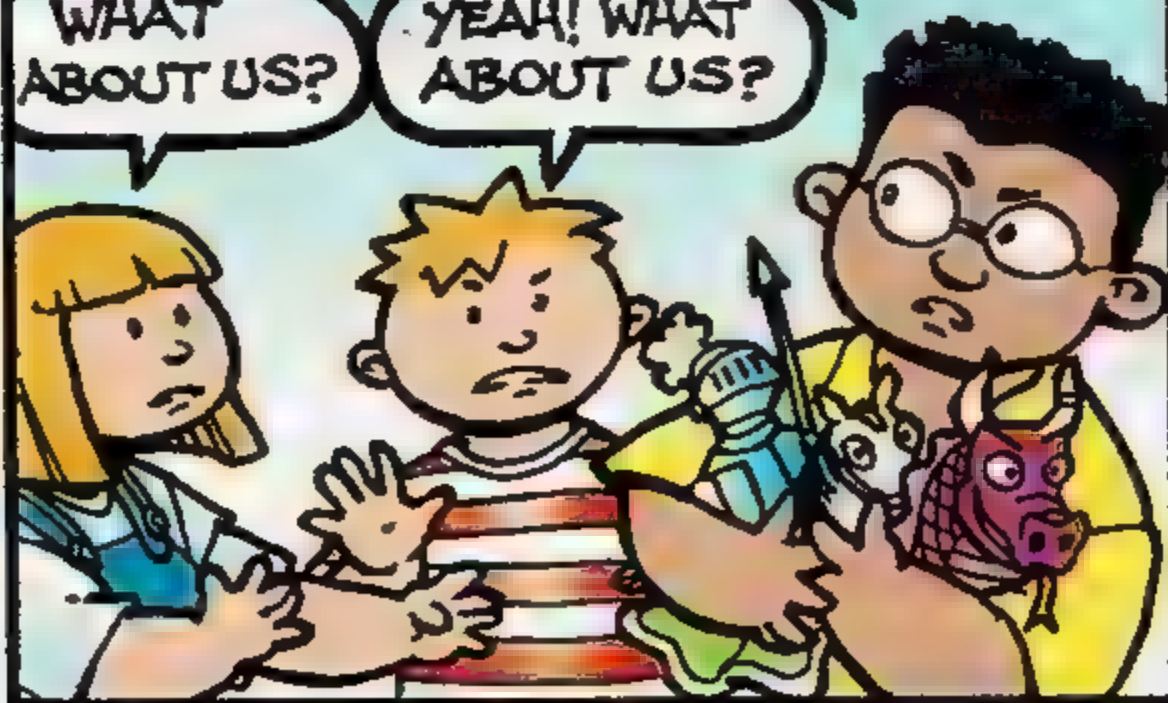

CAN I BE THE DRAGON?

HA! YOU'VE GOT TO BE KIDDING! I'M GOING TO BE THE KNIGHT... AND THE DRAGON!

WHAT ABOUT US?

YEAH! WHAT ABOUT US?

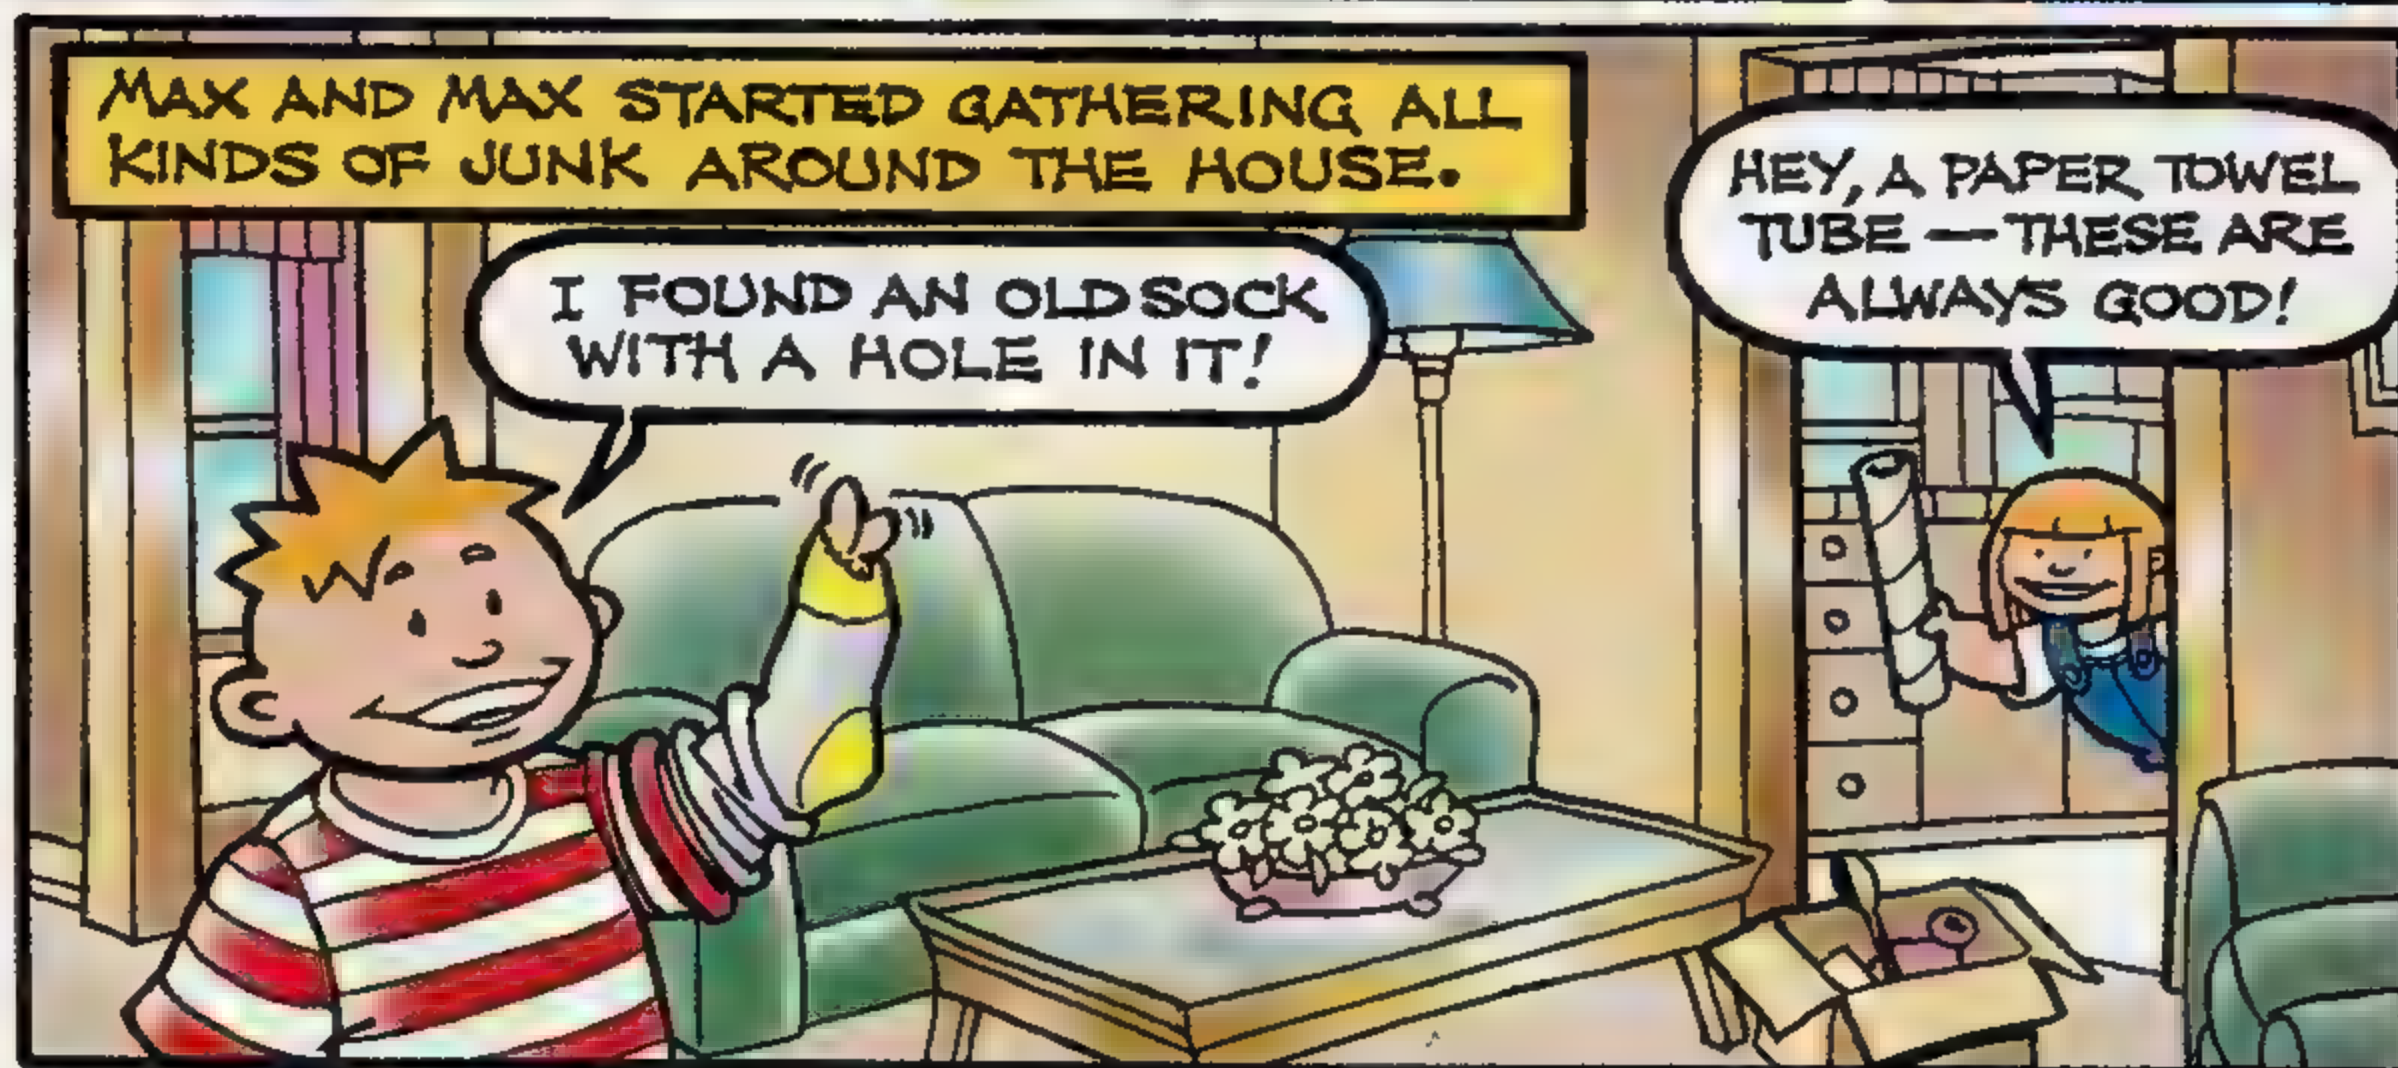

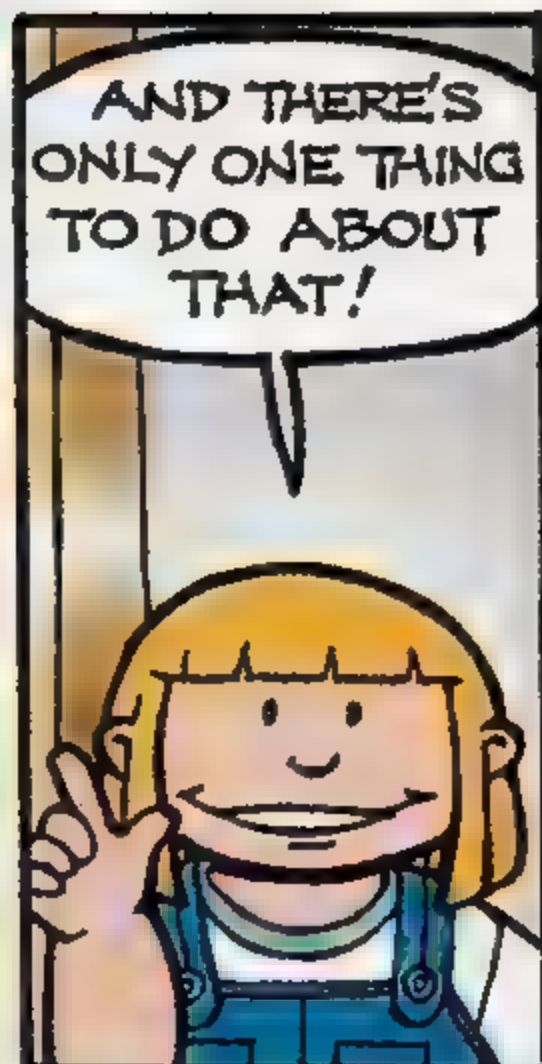

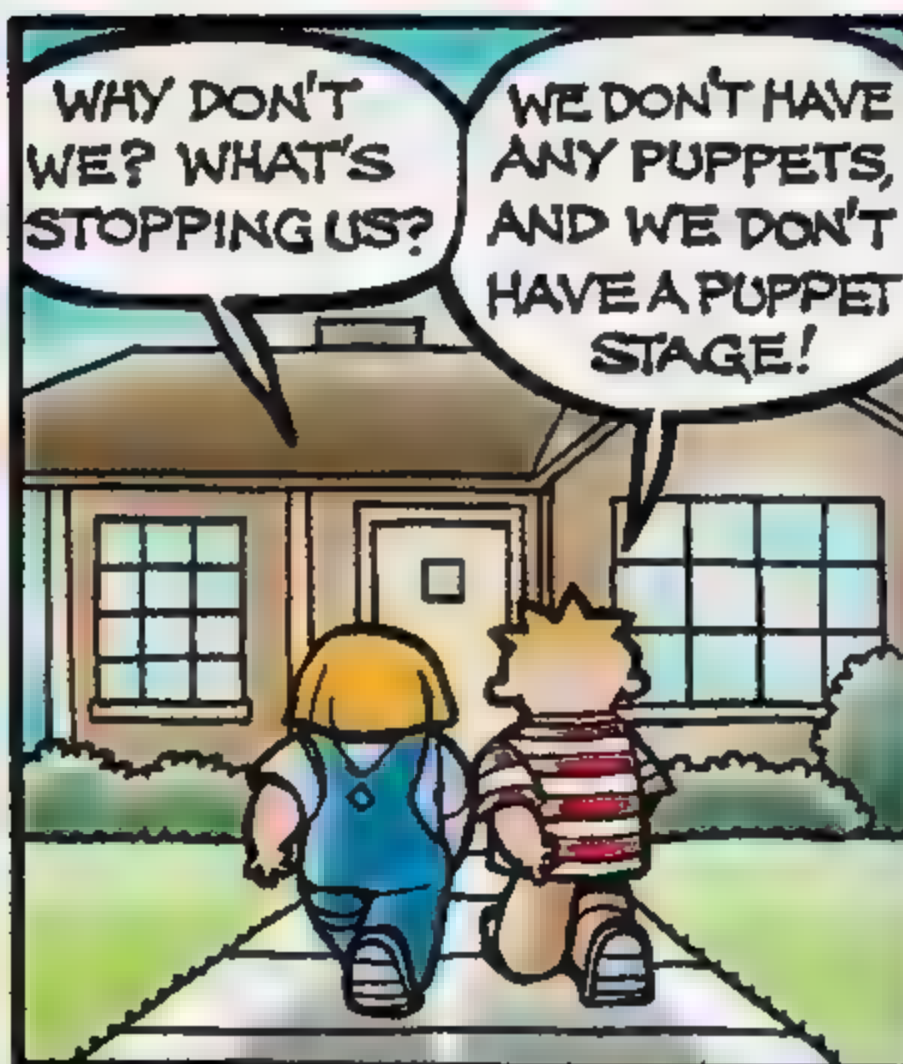

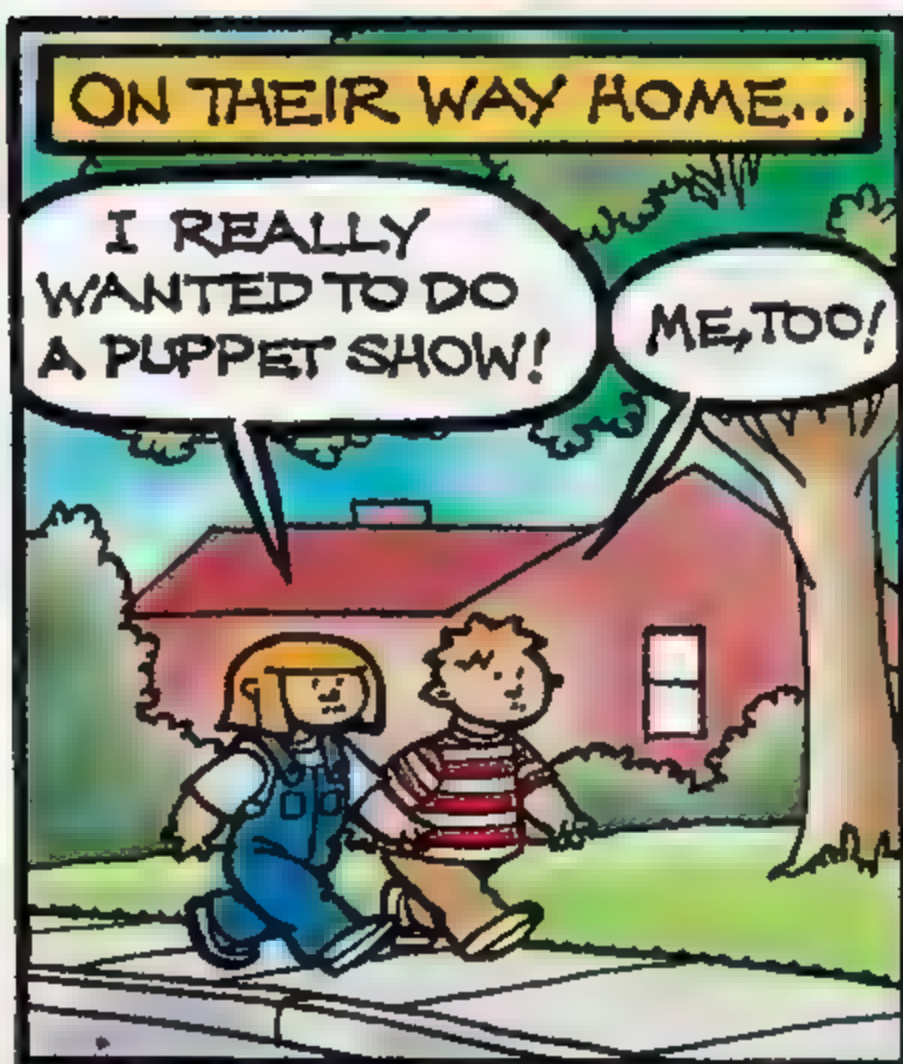

YOU GET TO WORK THE CURTAIN. THAT'S A VERY IMPORTANT JOB!

YEAH, RIGHT!

COME ON, MAX WE'RE GOING HOME!

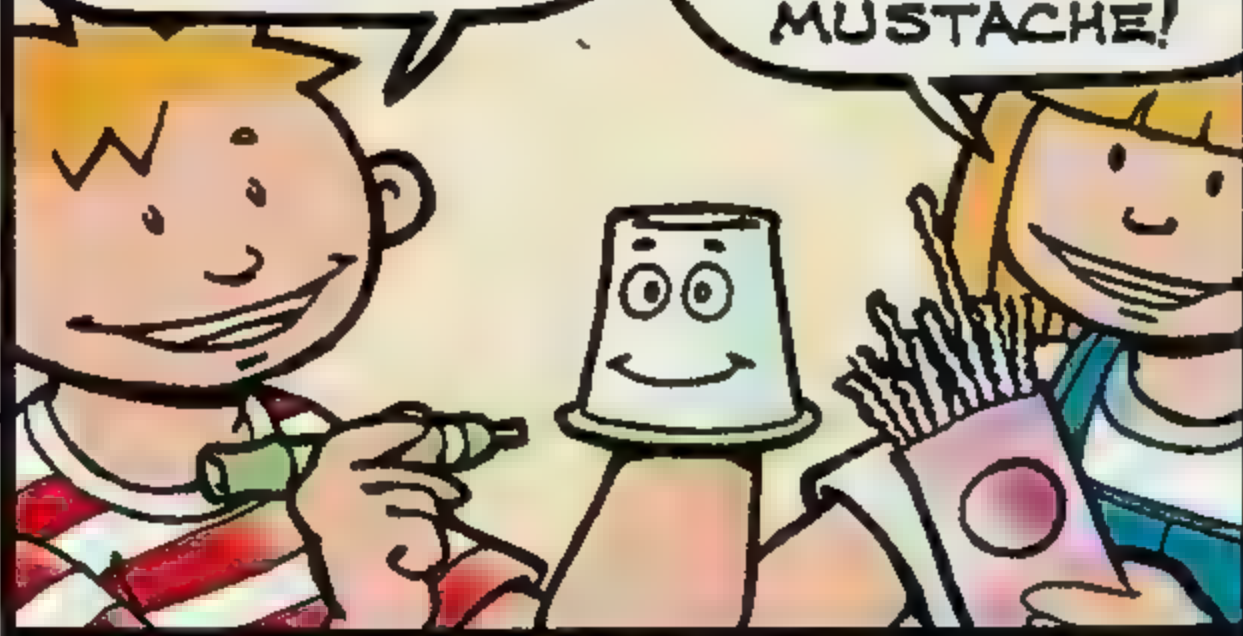

MAX & MAX FOUND THEY COULD MAKE PUPPETS OUT OF ALMOST ANYTHING!

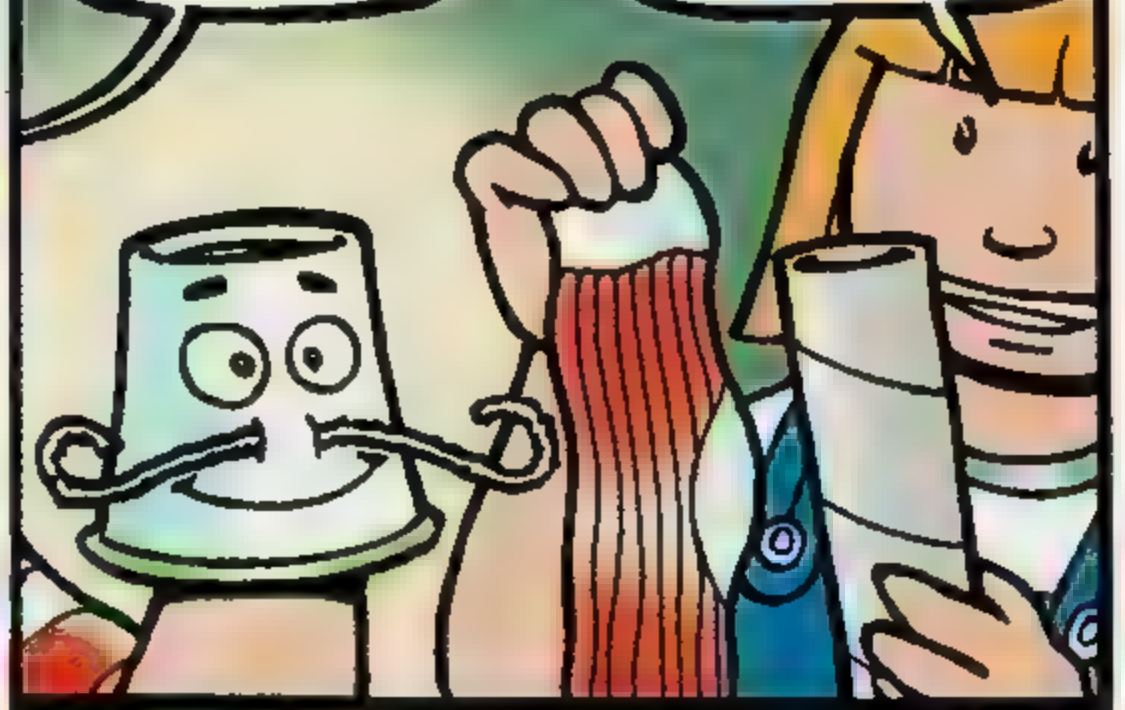

THIS PAPER CUP MAKES A NICE HEAD.

AND YOU CAN USE A PIPE CLEANER FOR A MUSTACHE!

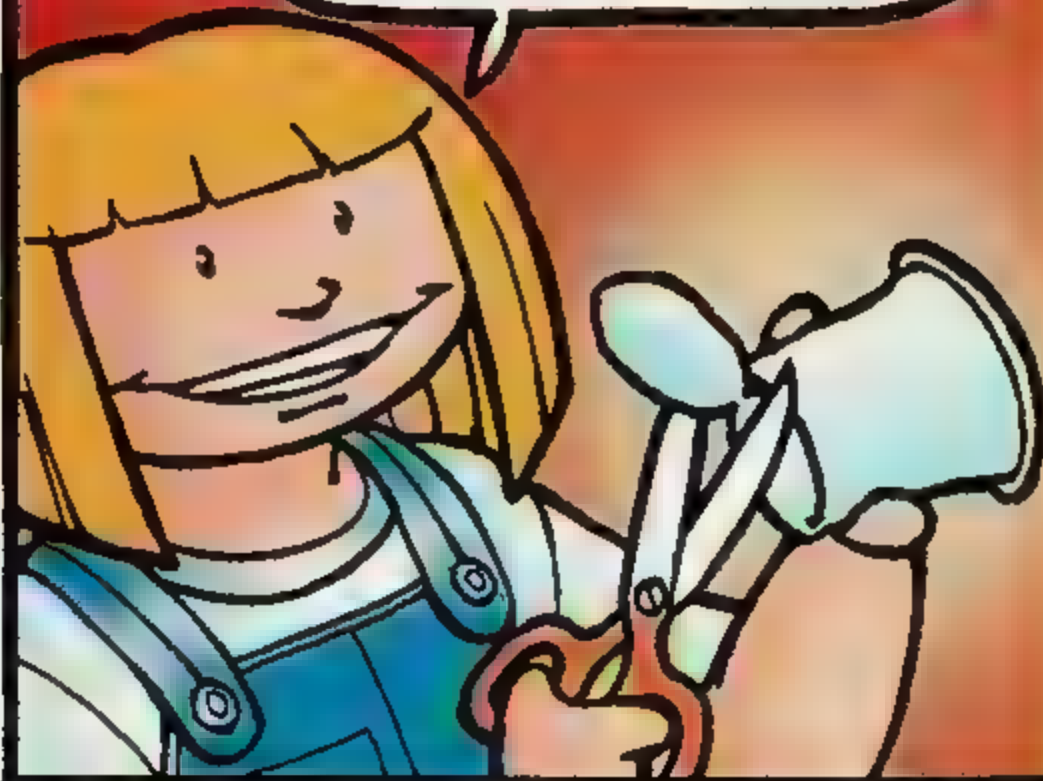

NOW OUR CUP-HEADED PUPPET NEEDS A BODY.

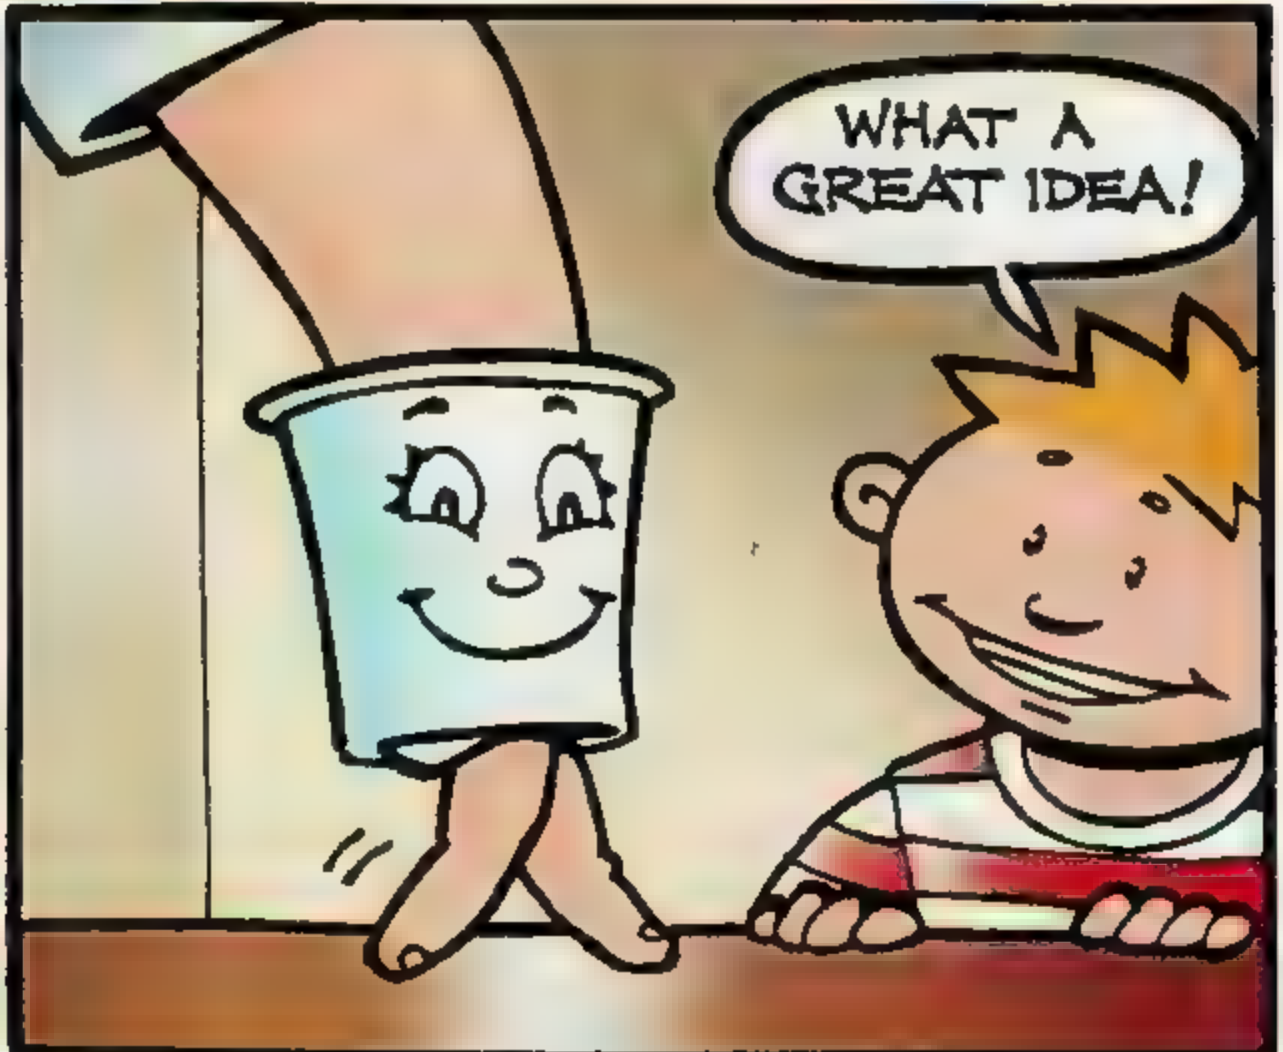

HOW ABOUT THIS SOCK... OR THE PAPER TOWEL TUBE.

I KNOW HOW WE CAN MAKE A PUPPET THAT WALKS!

WHAT A GREAT IDEA!

BUT MAX & MAX STILL NEEDED MORE PUPPETS FOR THEIR SHOW.

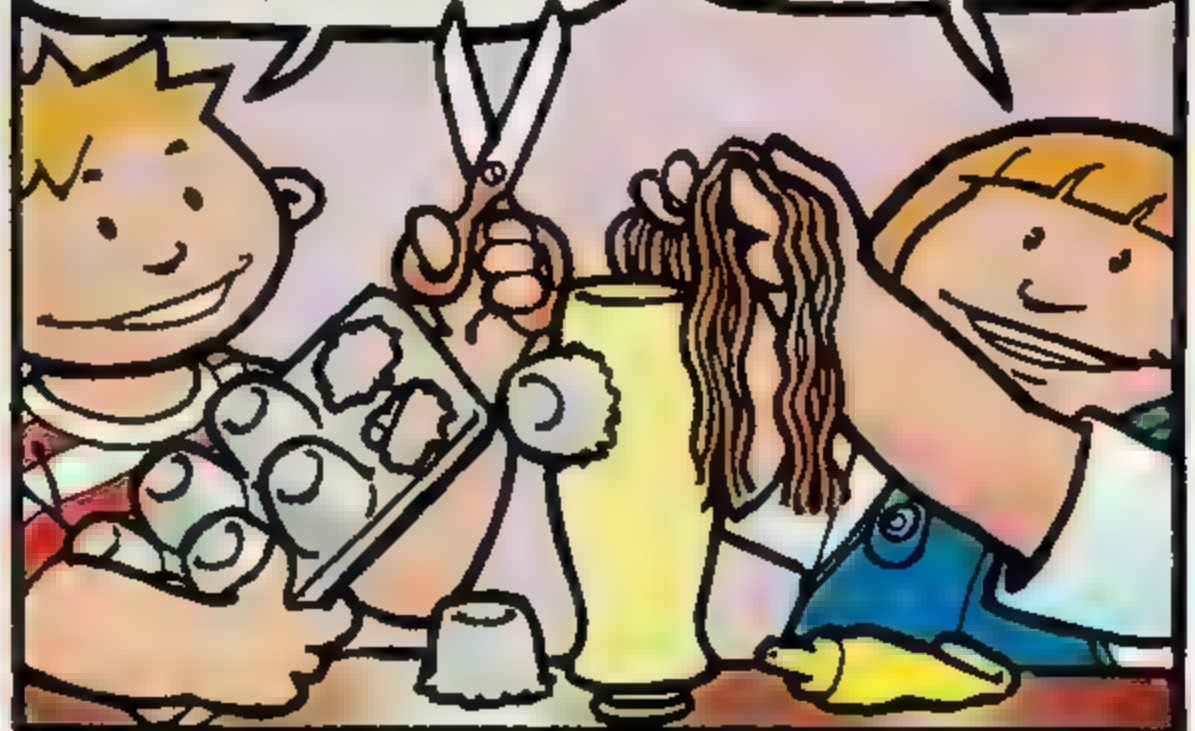

CAN WE USE THESE PLASTIC BOTTLES?

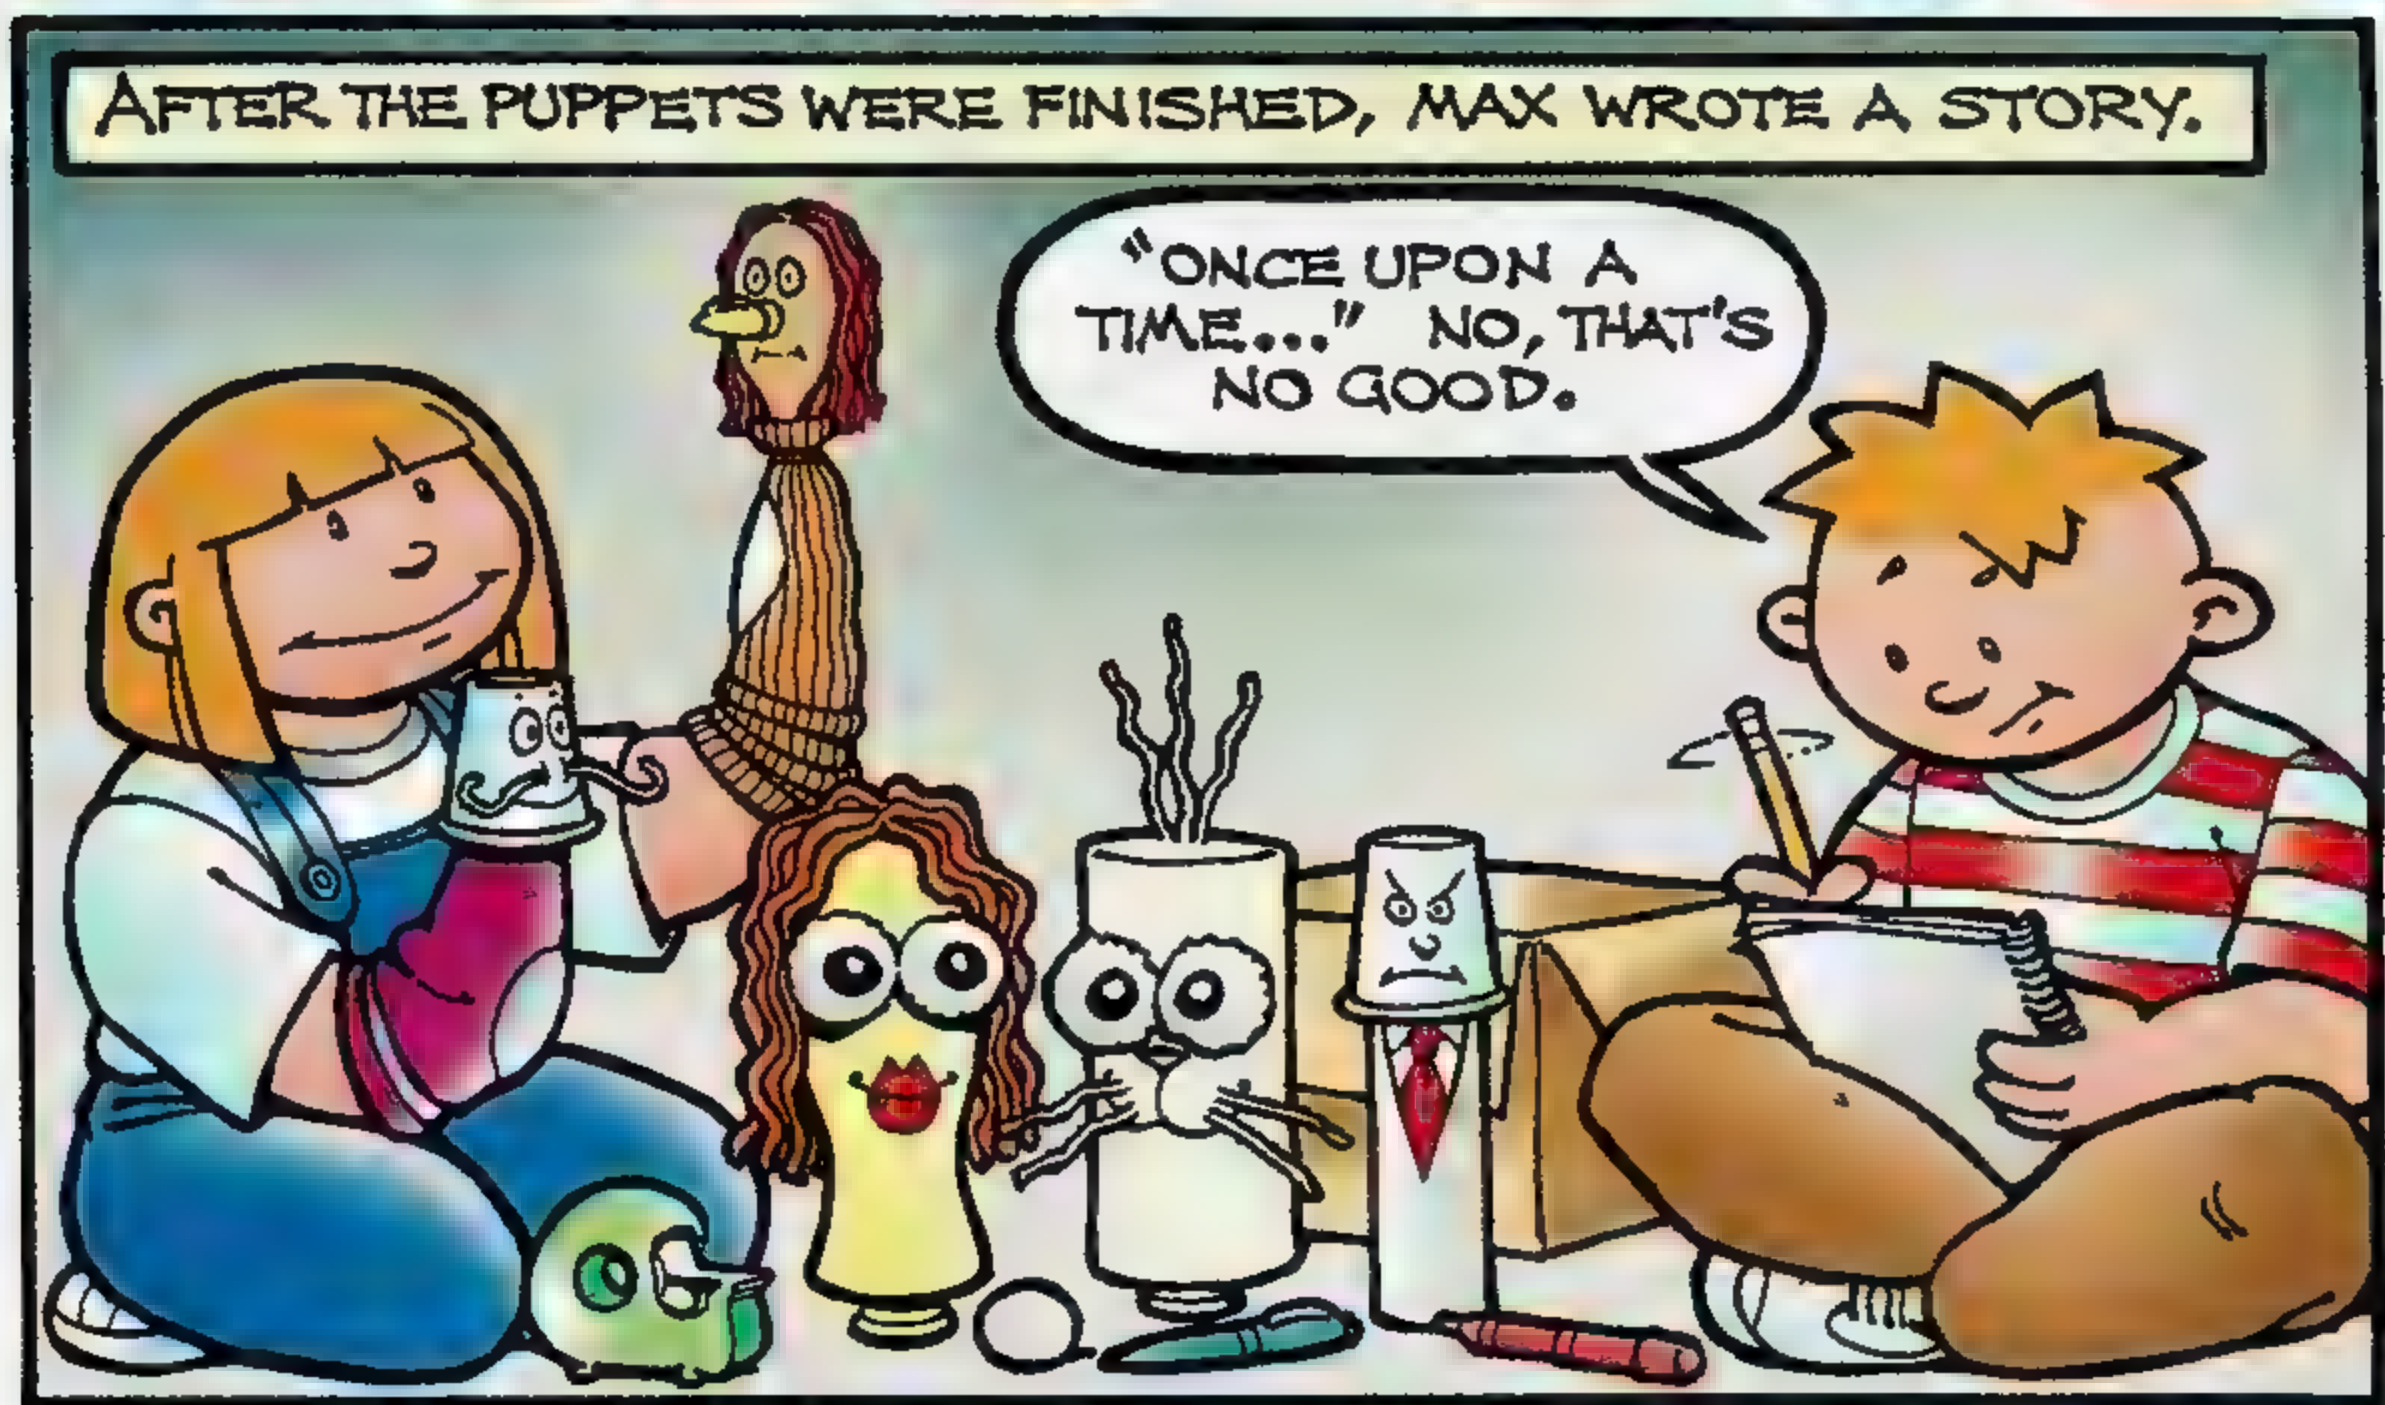

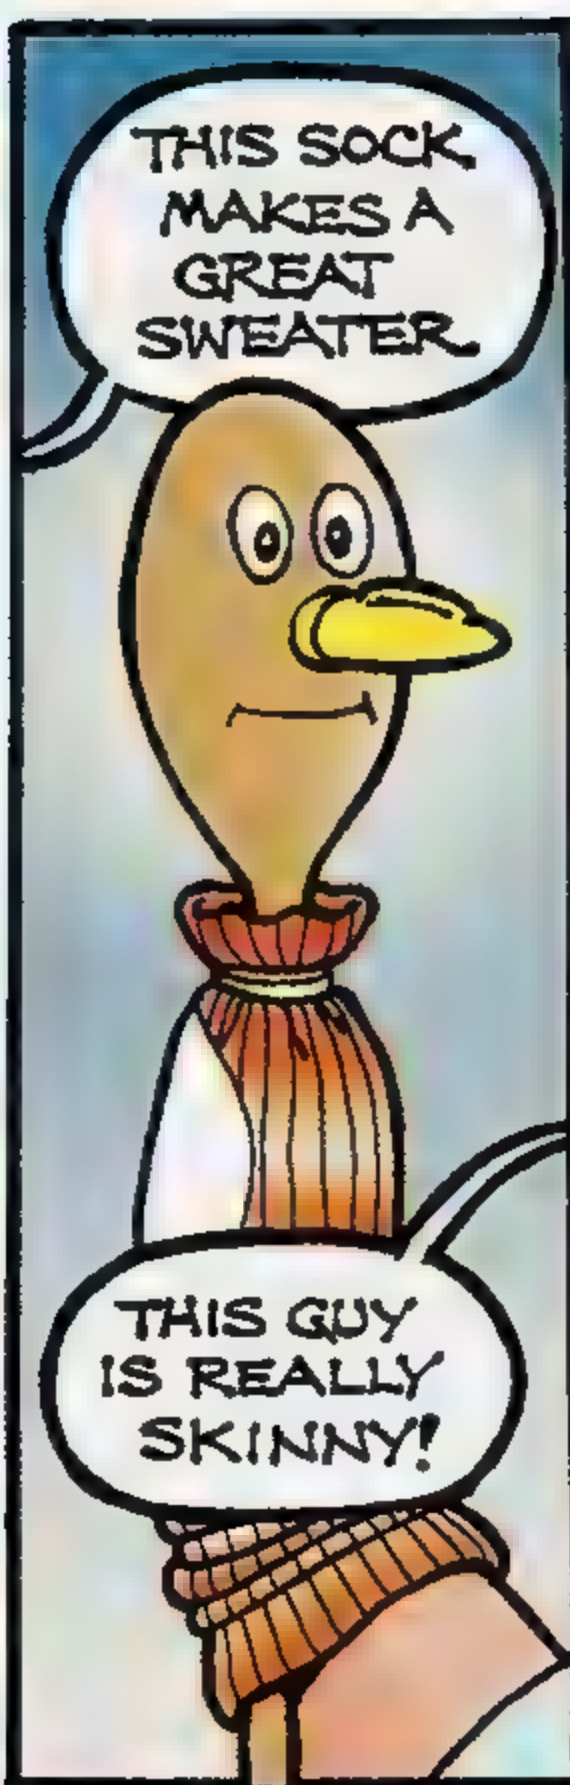

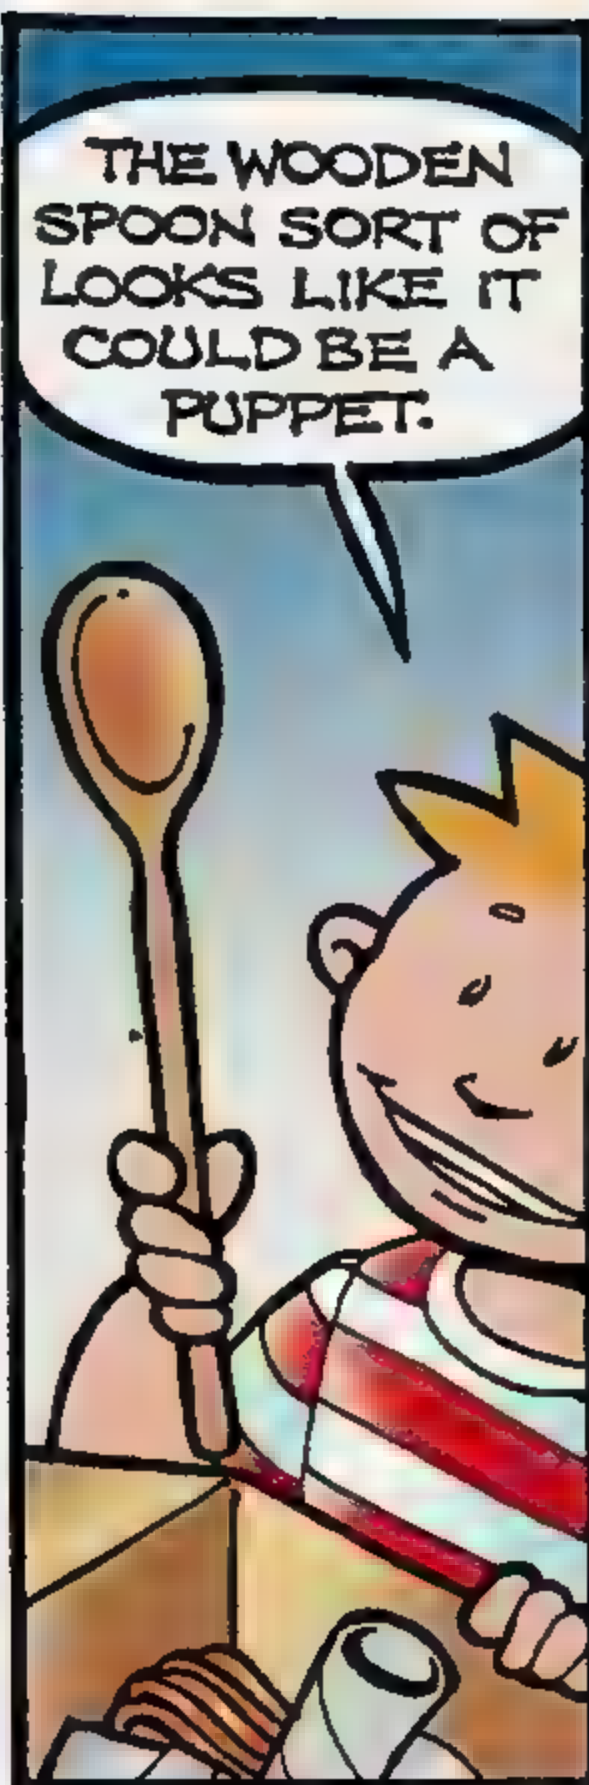

SURE...TURN THEM UPSIDE DOWN WE'LL USE THEM FOR HEADS!

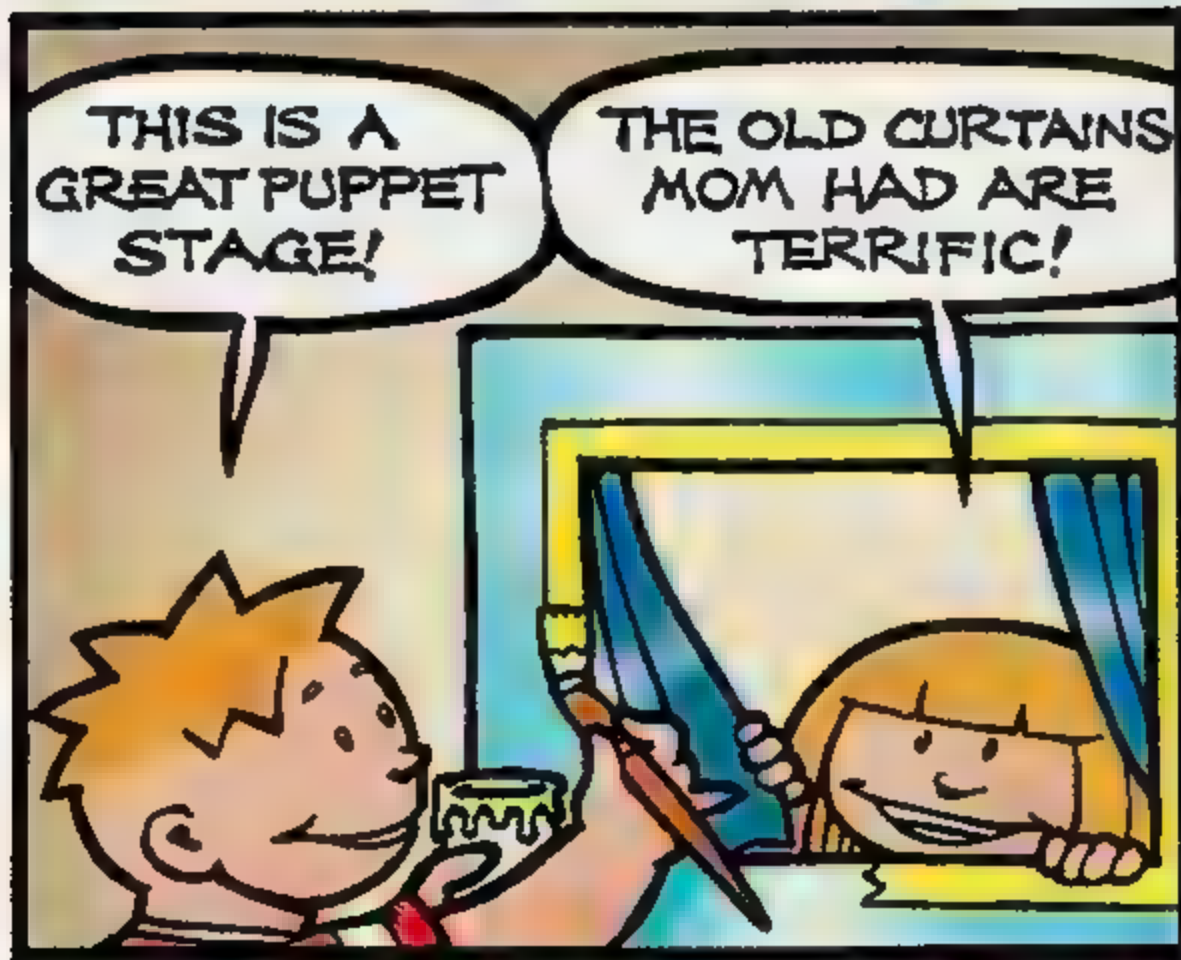

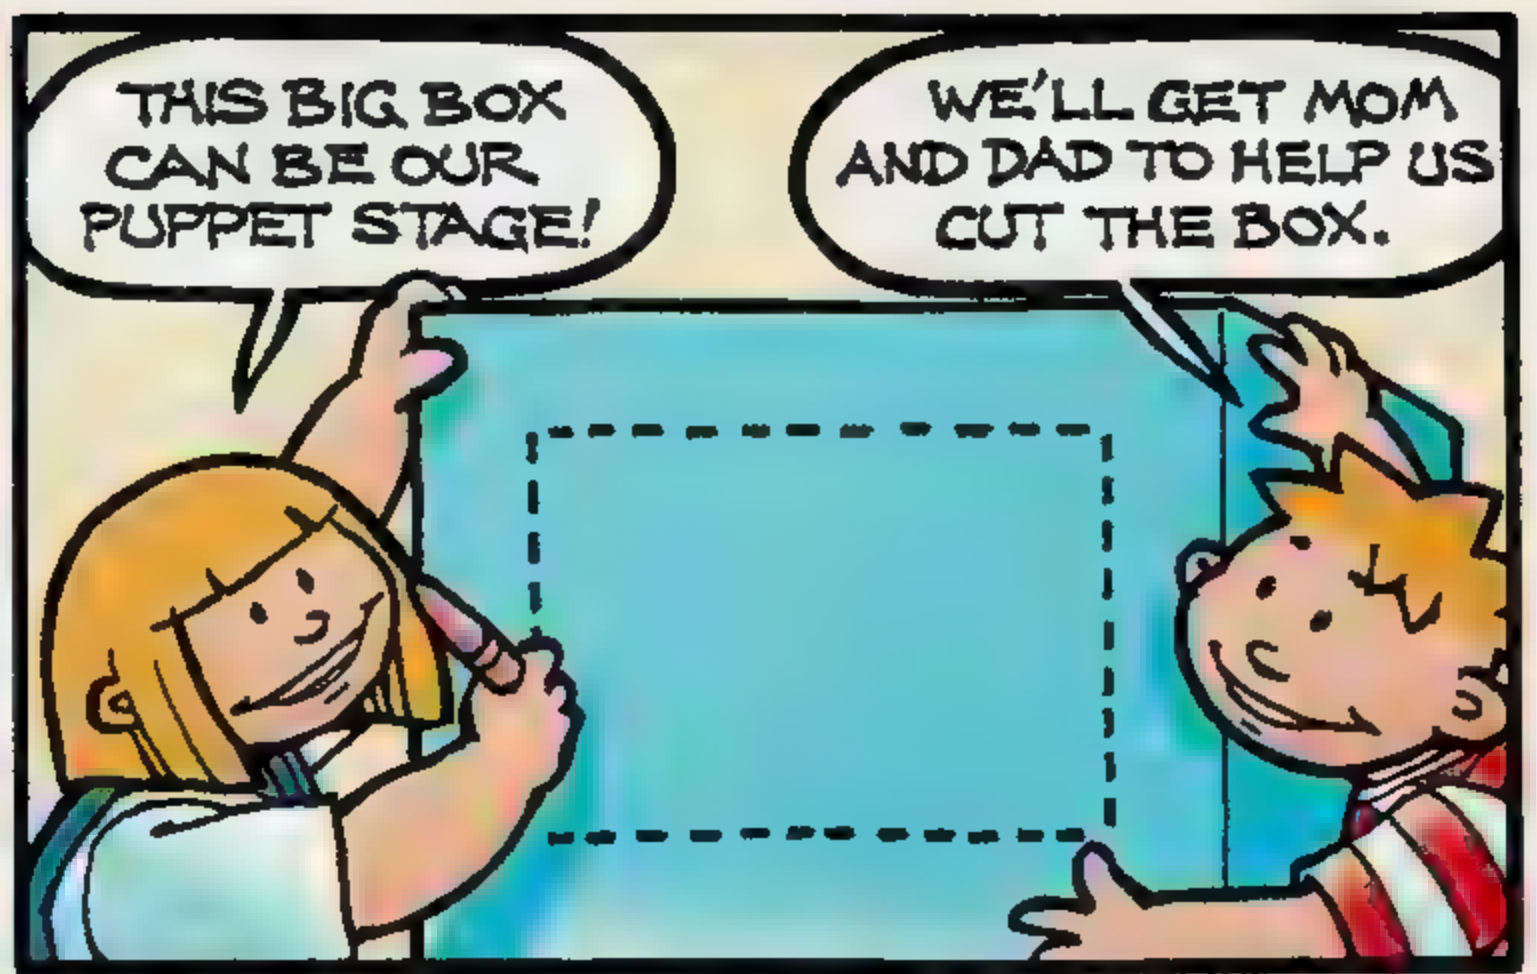

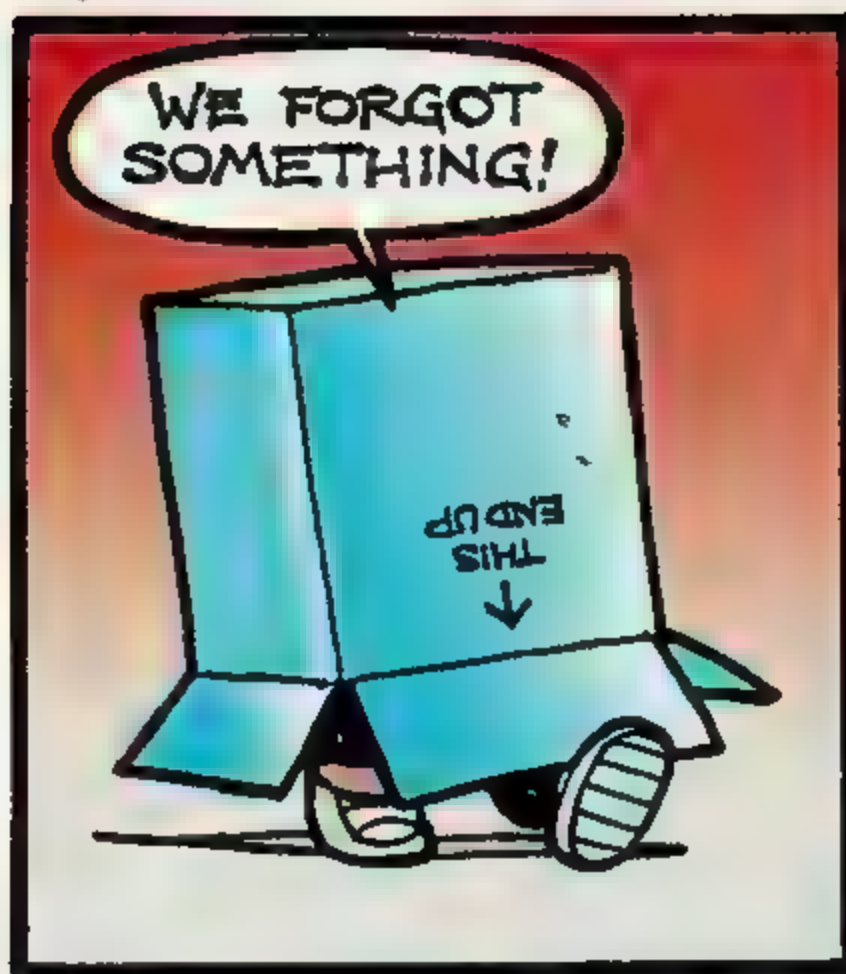

THE CUPS FROM THIS EGG CARTON WILL MAKE GREAT BULGY EYES!

HERE'S SOME YARN WE CAN USE FOR HAIR!

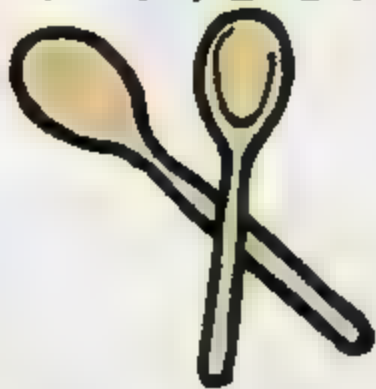

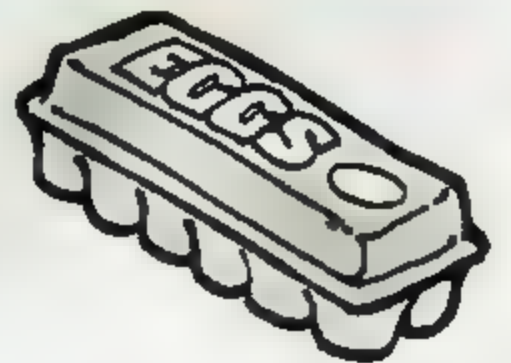

TO MAKE THE PUPPETS IN THIS STORY, YOU'LL NEED...

- PLASTIC SOAP BOTTLES
- WOODEN SPOONS

- PIPE CLEANERS
- YARN
- AN OLD PEN CAP

- PAPER OR PLASTIC CUPS
- PAPER TOWEL TUBES
- OLD (BUT CLEAN) SOCKS

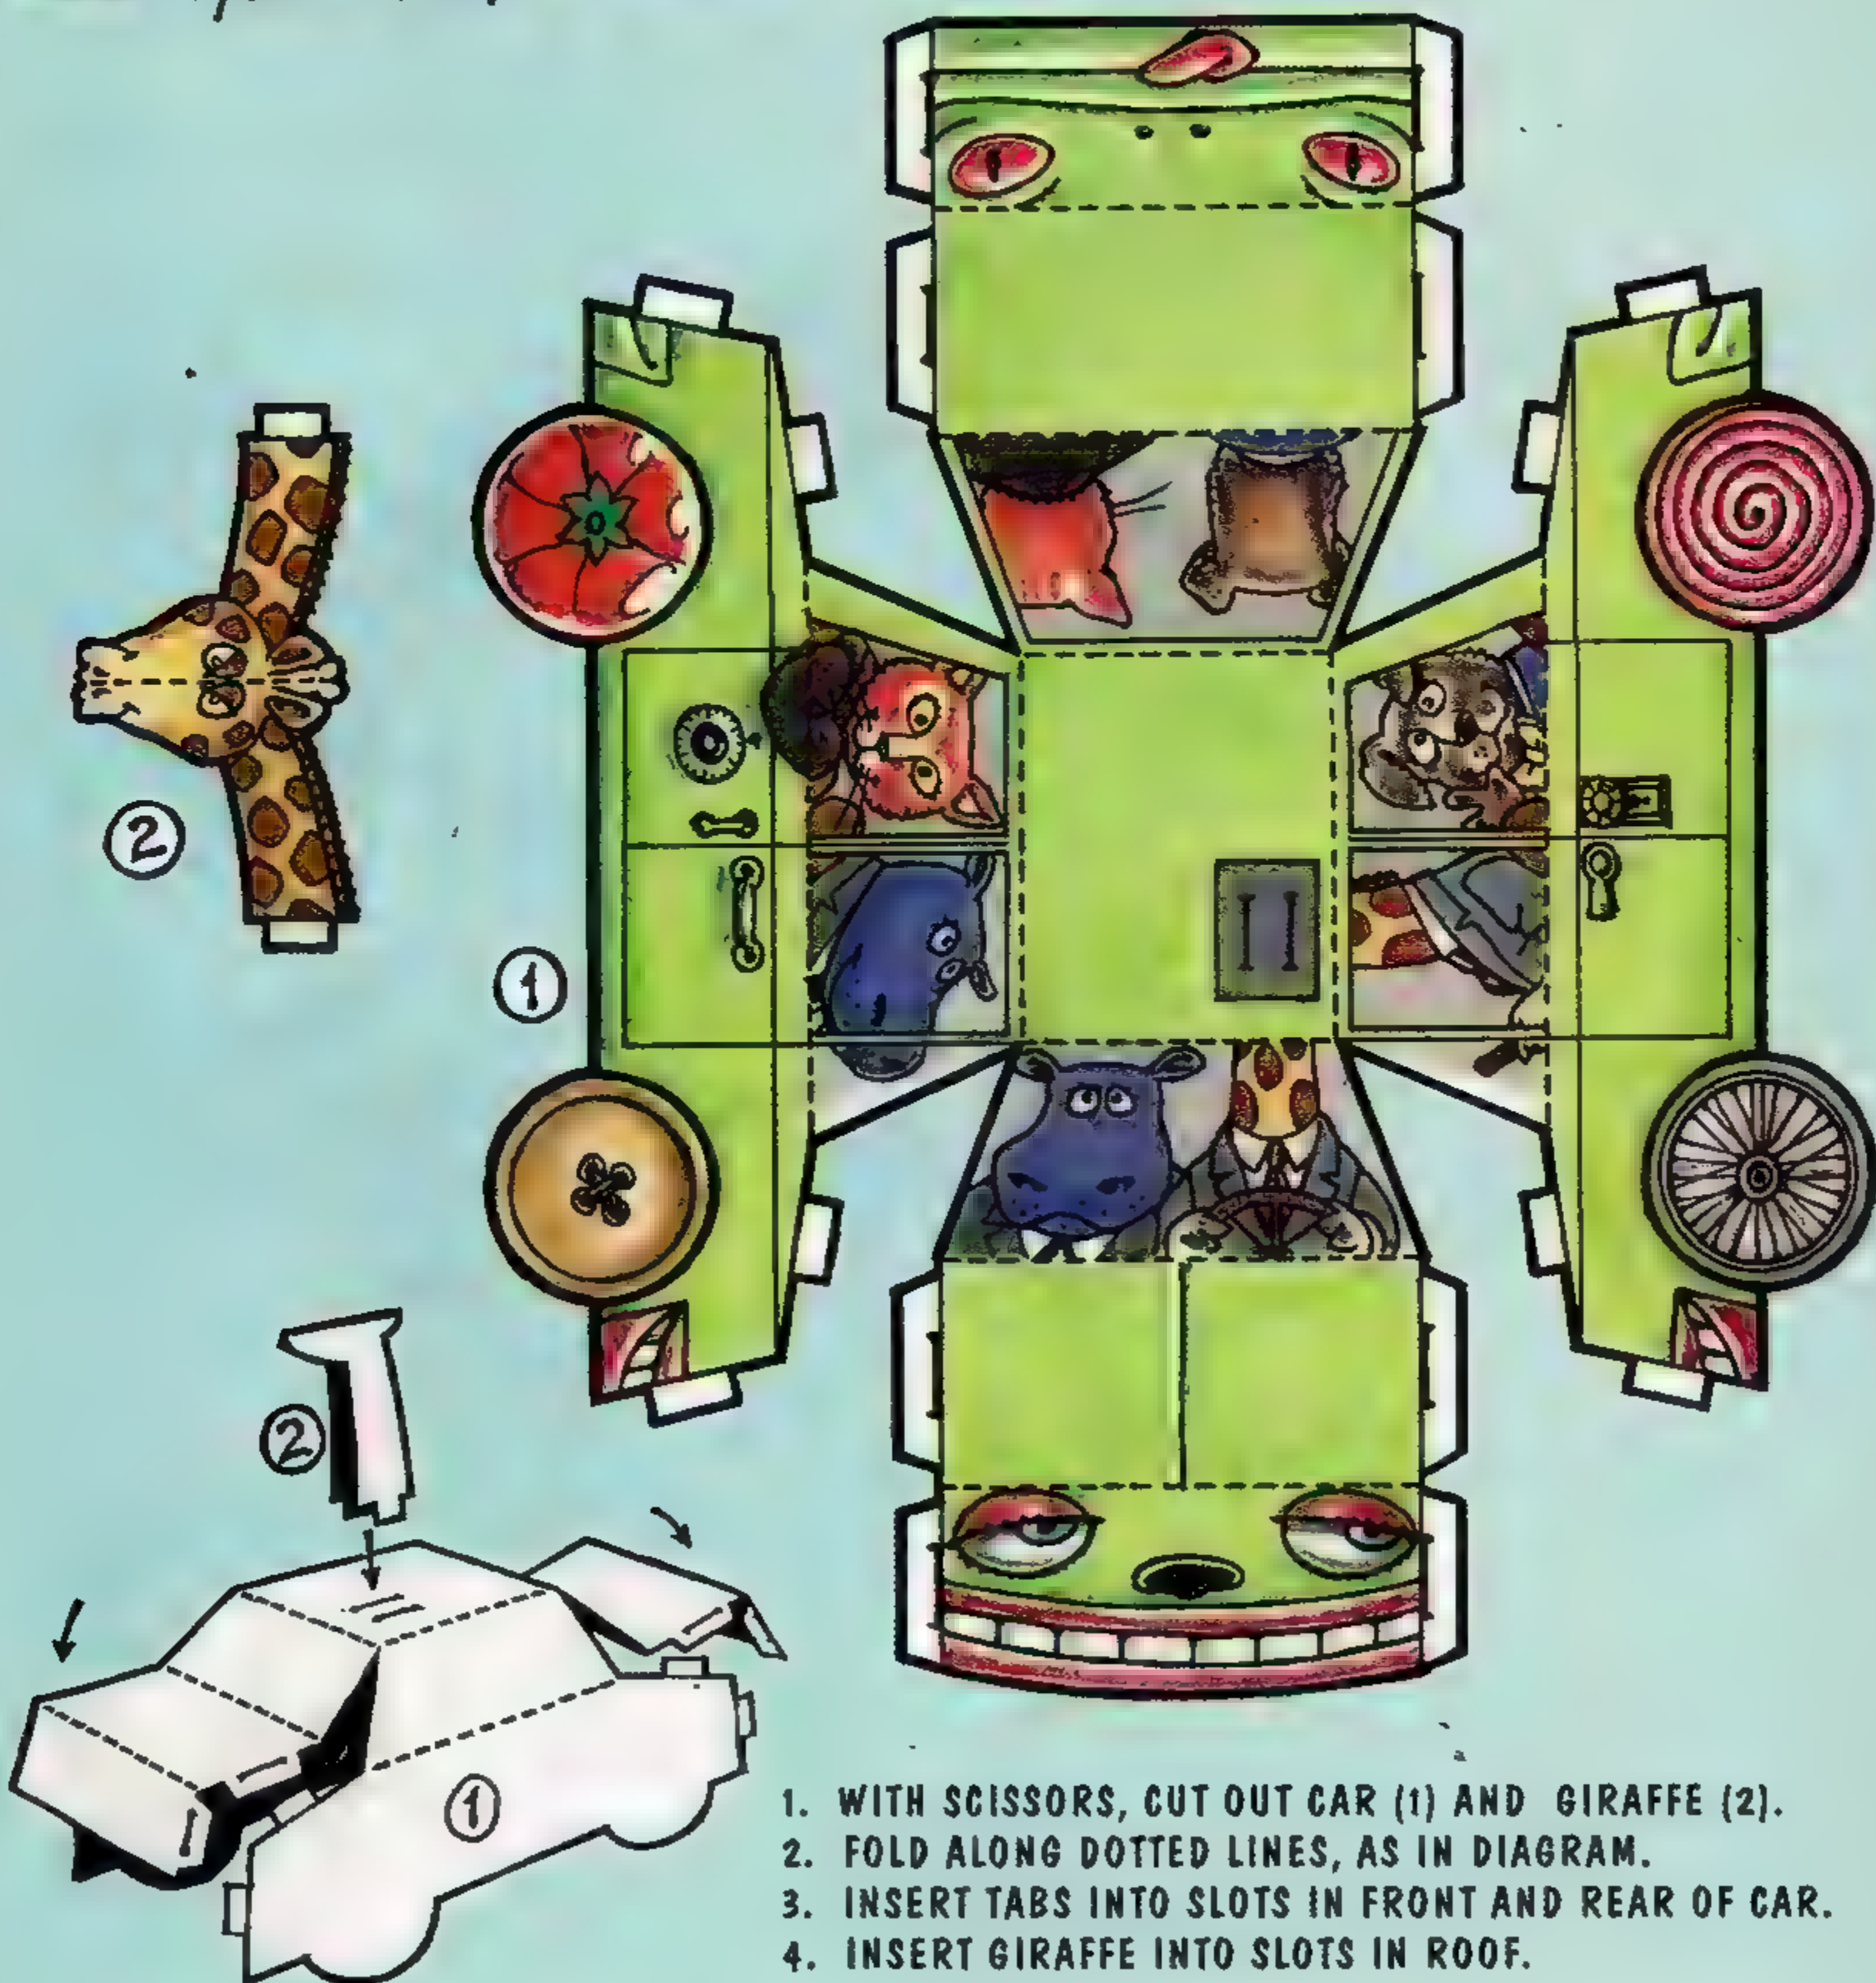

- AN EGG CARTON
- MARKERS
- GLUE AND/OR TAPE

YOU CAN ALSO USE LOTS OF OTHER OBJECTS TO MAKE PUPPETS — PLASTIC SPOONS, PING-PONG BALLS, BEADS, FEATHERS, AND ANY OTHER STUFF YOU FIND AROUND THE HOUSE.

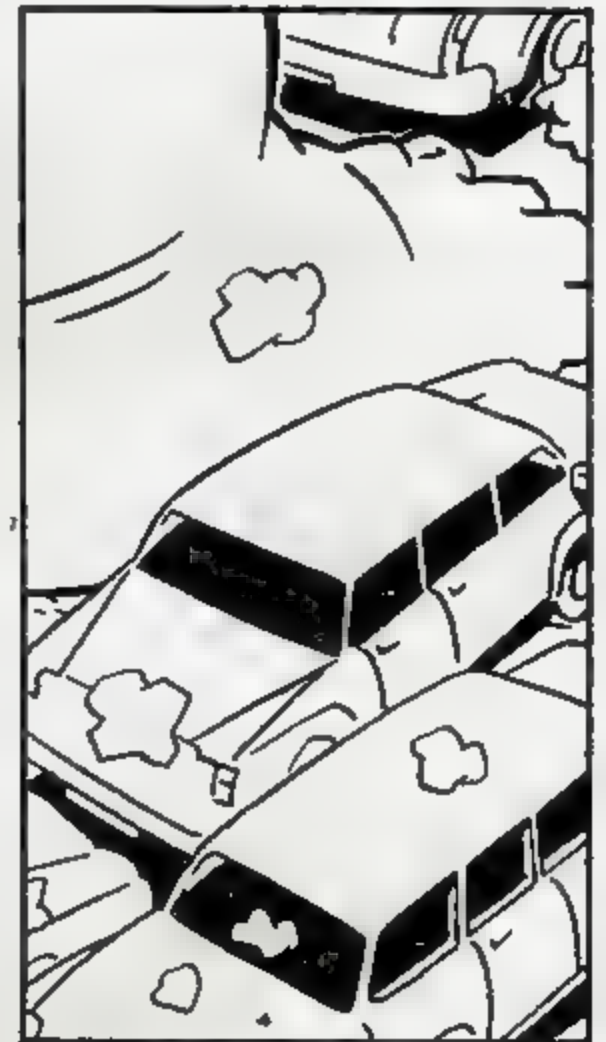

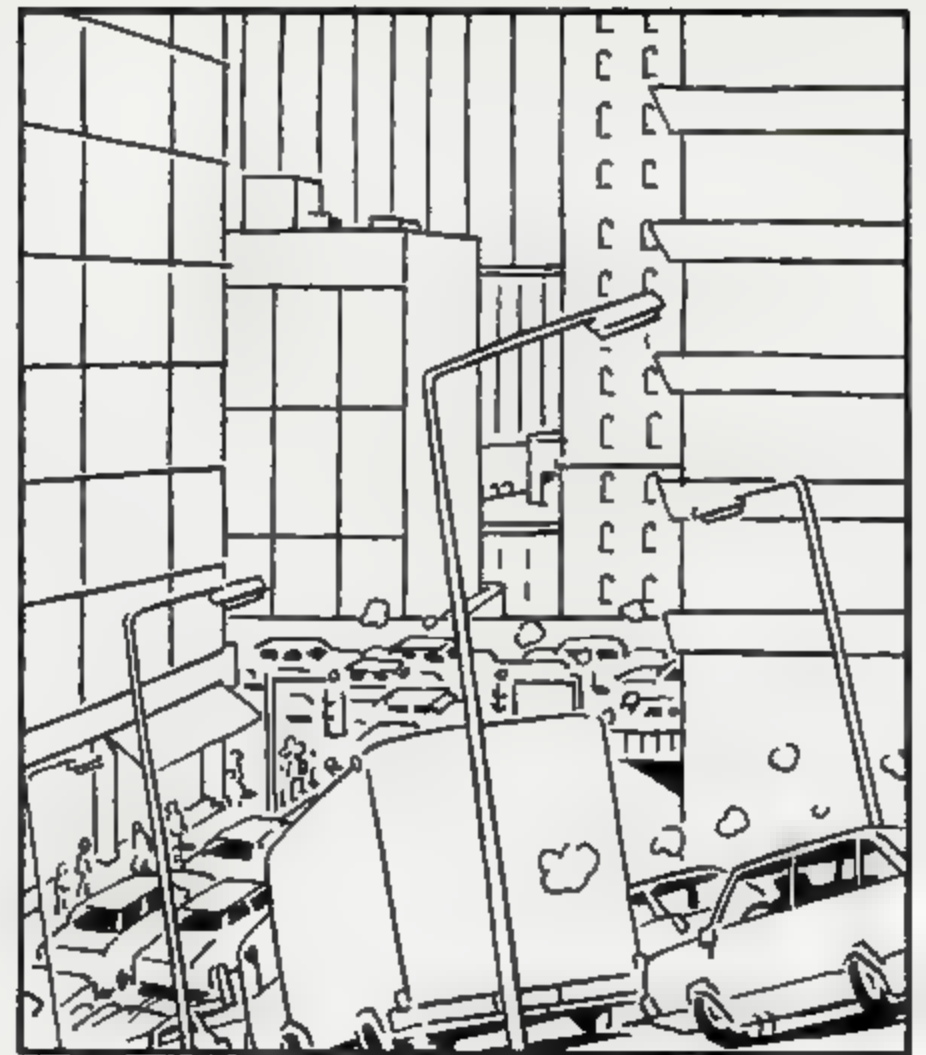

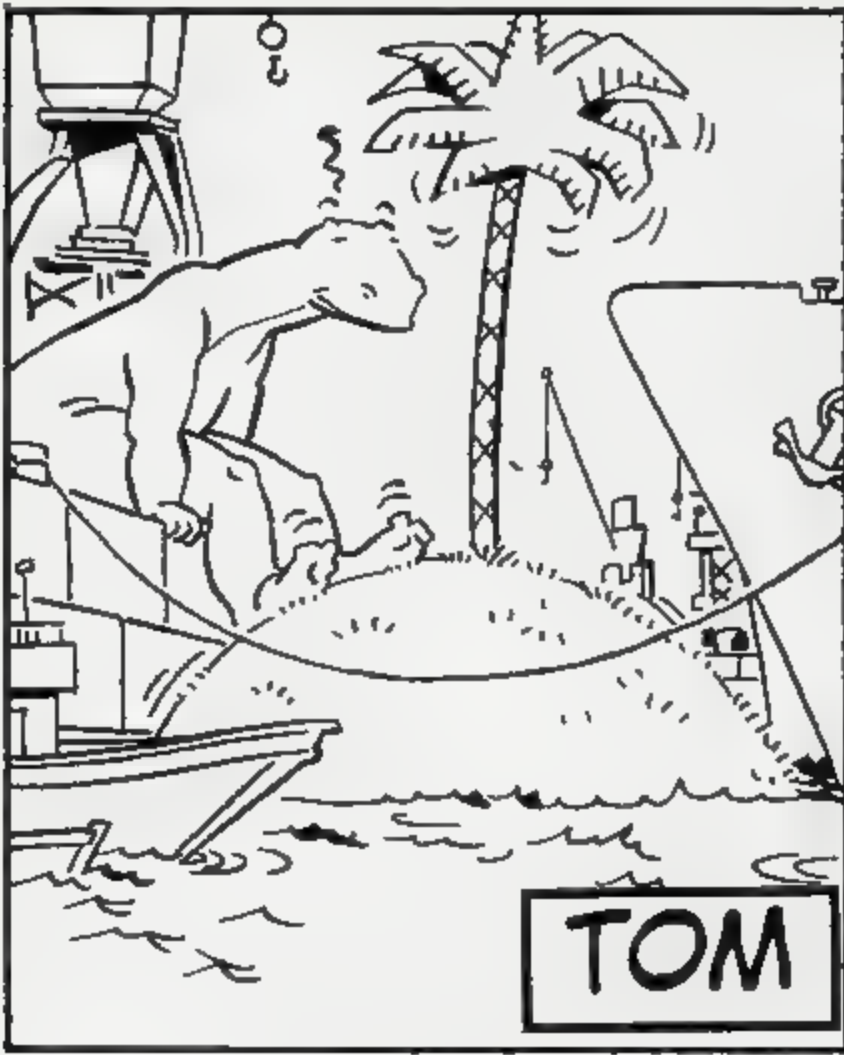

PUPPETS CAN BE MADE FROM MOST ANYTHING, SO ASK YOUR PARENTS TO SAVE ALL KINDS OF BOXES, PLASTIC BOTTLES AND CONTAINERS. MAKE SURE YOU WASH BOTTLES BEFORE USING THEM. AND ALWAYS ASK YOUR PARENTS BEFORE YOU USE SOMETHING FOR YOUR PUPPET. IF YOU WOULD LIKE TO LEARN MORE ABOUT PUPPETS, VISIT YOUR LOCAL LIBRARY. HAVE FUN!

Casper's Collectible Corner

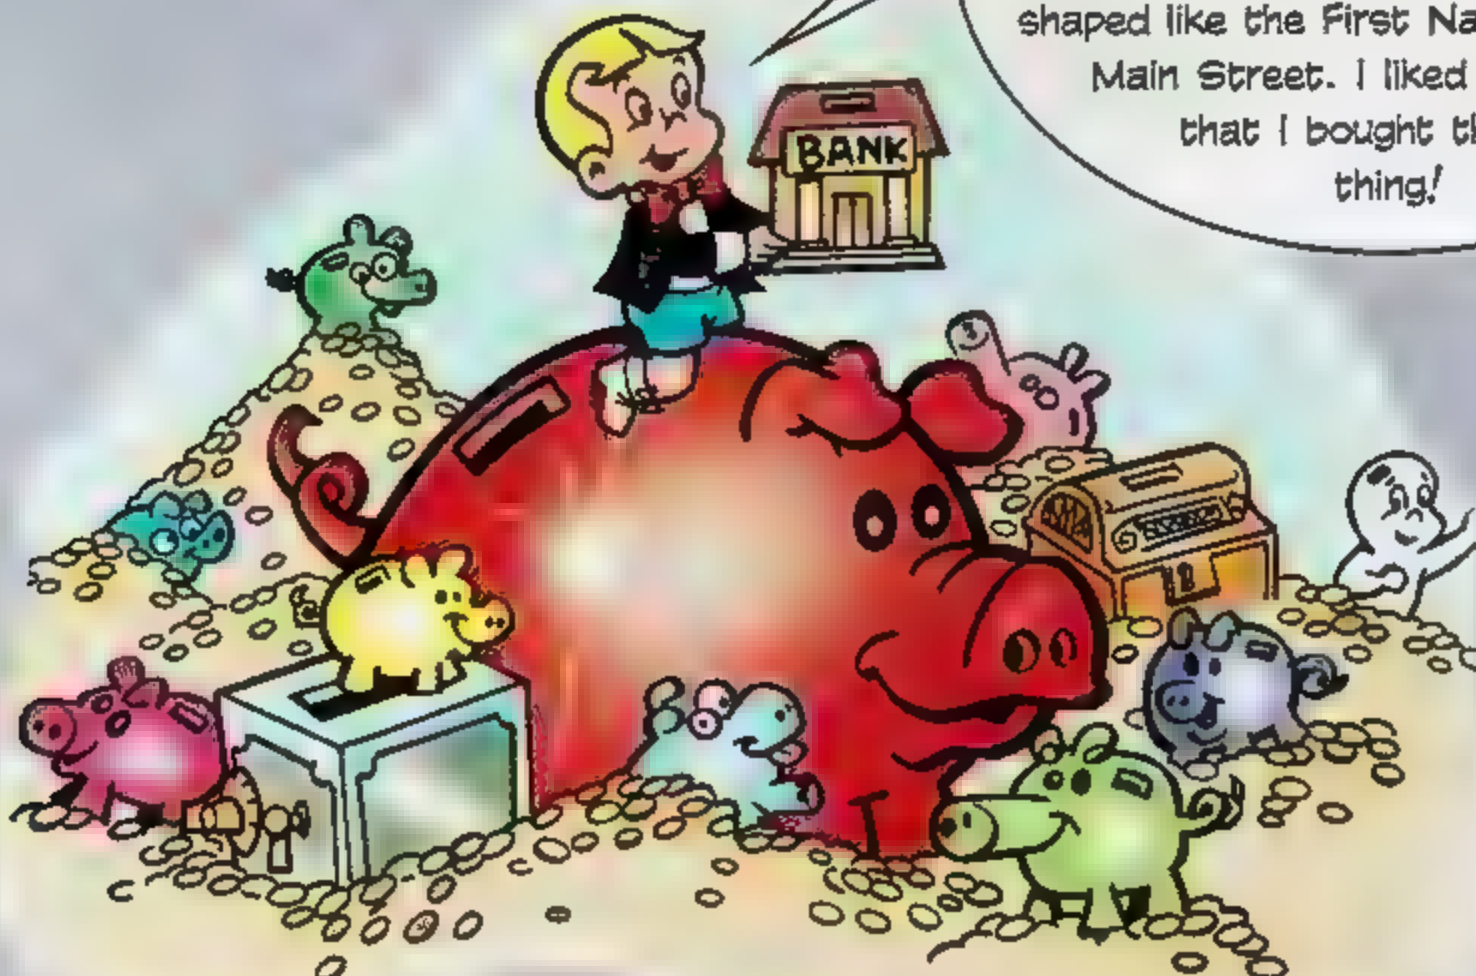

Hi,
everybody! You know, people love to collect things. For example, I collect friends! I have lots of them! And I know my friends at Harvey also enjoy collecting. Let's see what they collect.

This is my incredible broom collection. Not only are they fun to look at, but I can take them out for a spin whenever I want. This is a very rare one—it's a 1968 Strawman convertible. It's in great condition. A little old witch from Salem drove it to the supermarket only once a week.

Lots of people collect coins, but I collect things to put coins in—banks! I have a piggy bank and I have a bank shaped like my pal, Casper...but this is my favorite. It's shaped like the First National Bank on Main Street. I liked it so much that I bought the real thing!

Baby Huey's Ducktionary

Gendarme

The police are our friends and we should respect and admire them. Many times policemen and women face danger to protect us and that's pretty terrific.

Some people think that the name cops isn't a very nice thing to call a police person, but actually it comes from the name "coppers" because a hundred years ago or so, police wore copper badges. In Russia a common name for police is ments which means—well, it means cops, I guess. In England, police are called bobbies and in Italy, their name is carabinieri.

Most police in Canada are just called police, but there are also the Royal Mounted Police, better known as mounties. Some of them still get around mounted on horses, but most of them have moved onto cars. They're known for their dress outfits—red jackets and wide brimmed hats. Those uniforms are pretty spiffy looking, but they don't usually wear those when they're actually looking to fight crime.

French police are called gendarme and their dress outfit includes a cape and a kind of pillbox hat with a wide brim.

Police in the U.S. Army are called Military Police or M.P.'s and Navy police are known as Shore Patrol.

There's even a police force for the whole world. It's called Interpol and it's kind of a central agency so police from different countries can help each other. Interpol does a lot of work on cracking down on international smuggling, counterfeiting and catching spies.

Whatever you call them, police are mighty important.

Casper's Collectible Corner

I collect everything that has dots-toy giraffes, polka-dot clothing-you name it! I even wanted to adopt a Dalmatian, but the pound didn't have any. So, I'm going to make my very own.

I have lots of rattles. This is my favorite! I found it in my travels and it makes a great clink-clink sound.

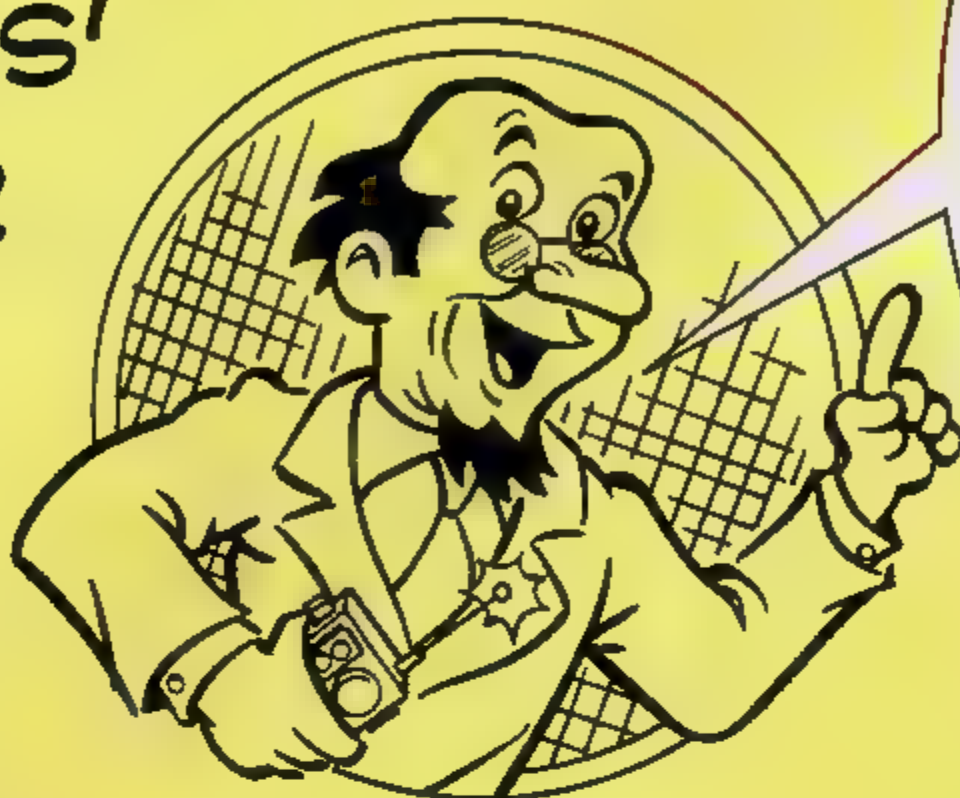

That's what we're collecting and right now, I want to collect YOUR collections! If you collect something unique or different, send us a letter all about your collection and a photo of you with your collection. Make sure you include your name, age and address. Who knows? Maybe we'll pick yours to be in a future issue of Harvey. We can't return photos, so please don't send us a pix you need back! Good luck, collectors!

PROFESSOR KEENBEAN'S WACKY INVENTIONS TO MAKE KIDS' LIVES EASIER

*Greetings!
Professor Keenbean here with some of my latest earth-shattering inventions that could someday soon make your lives easier.*

1. KISS-SHIELDS

PROBLEM: Face protectors!

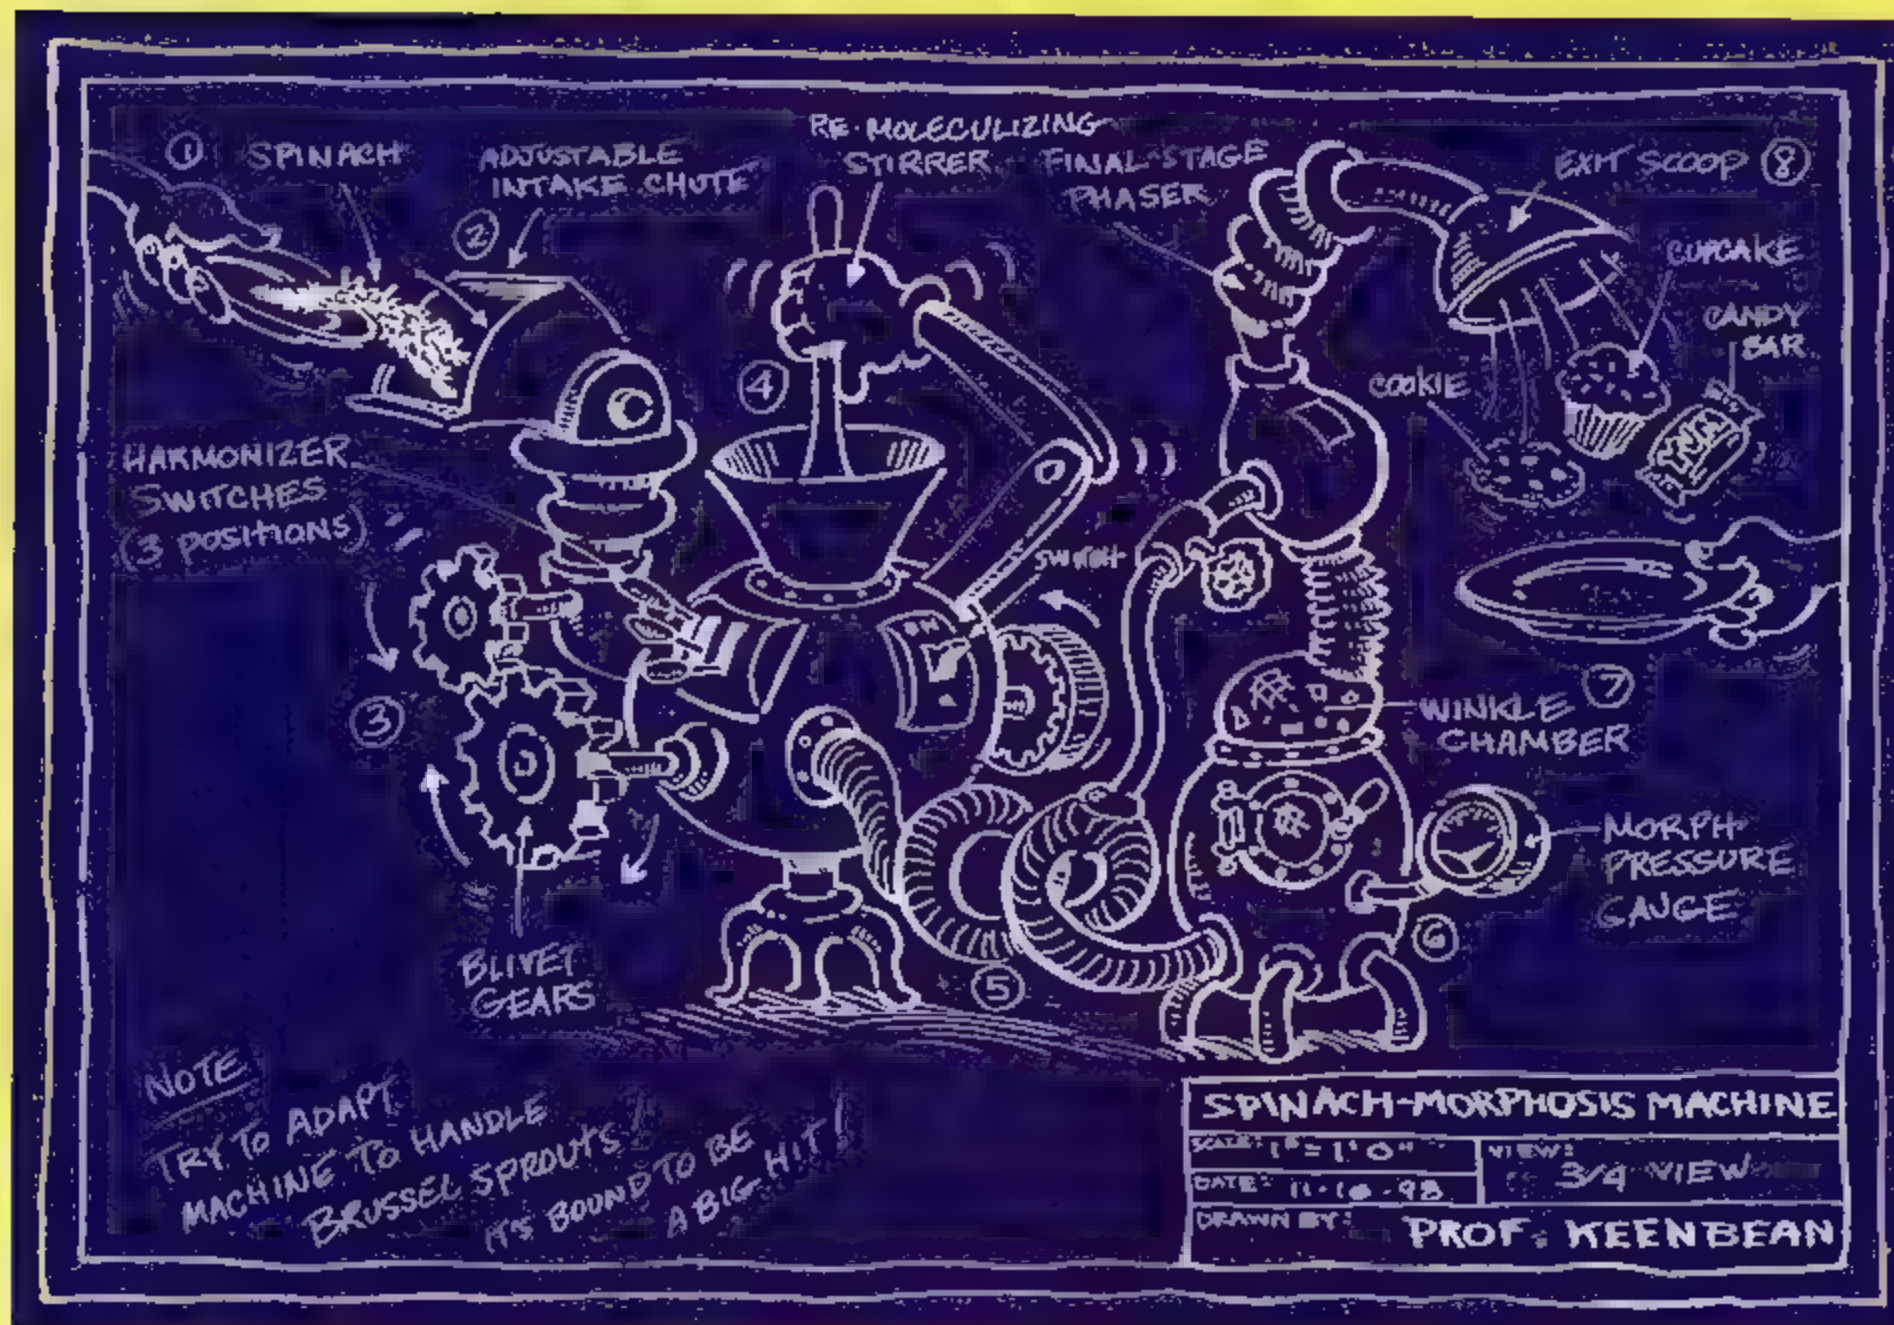

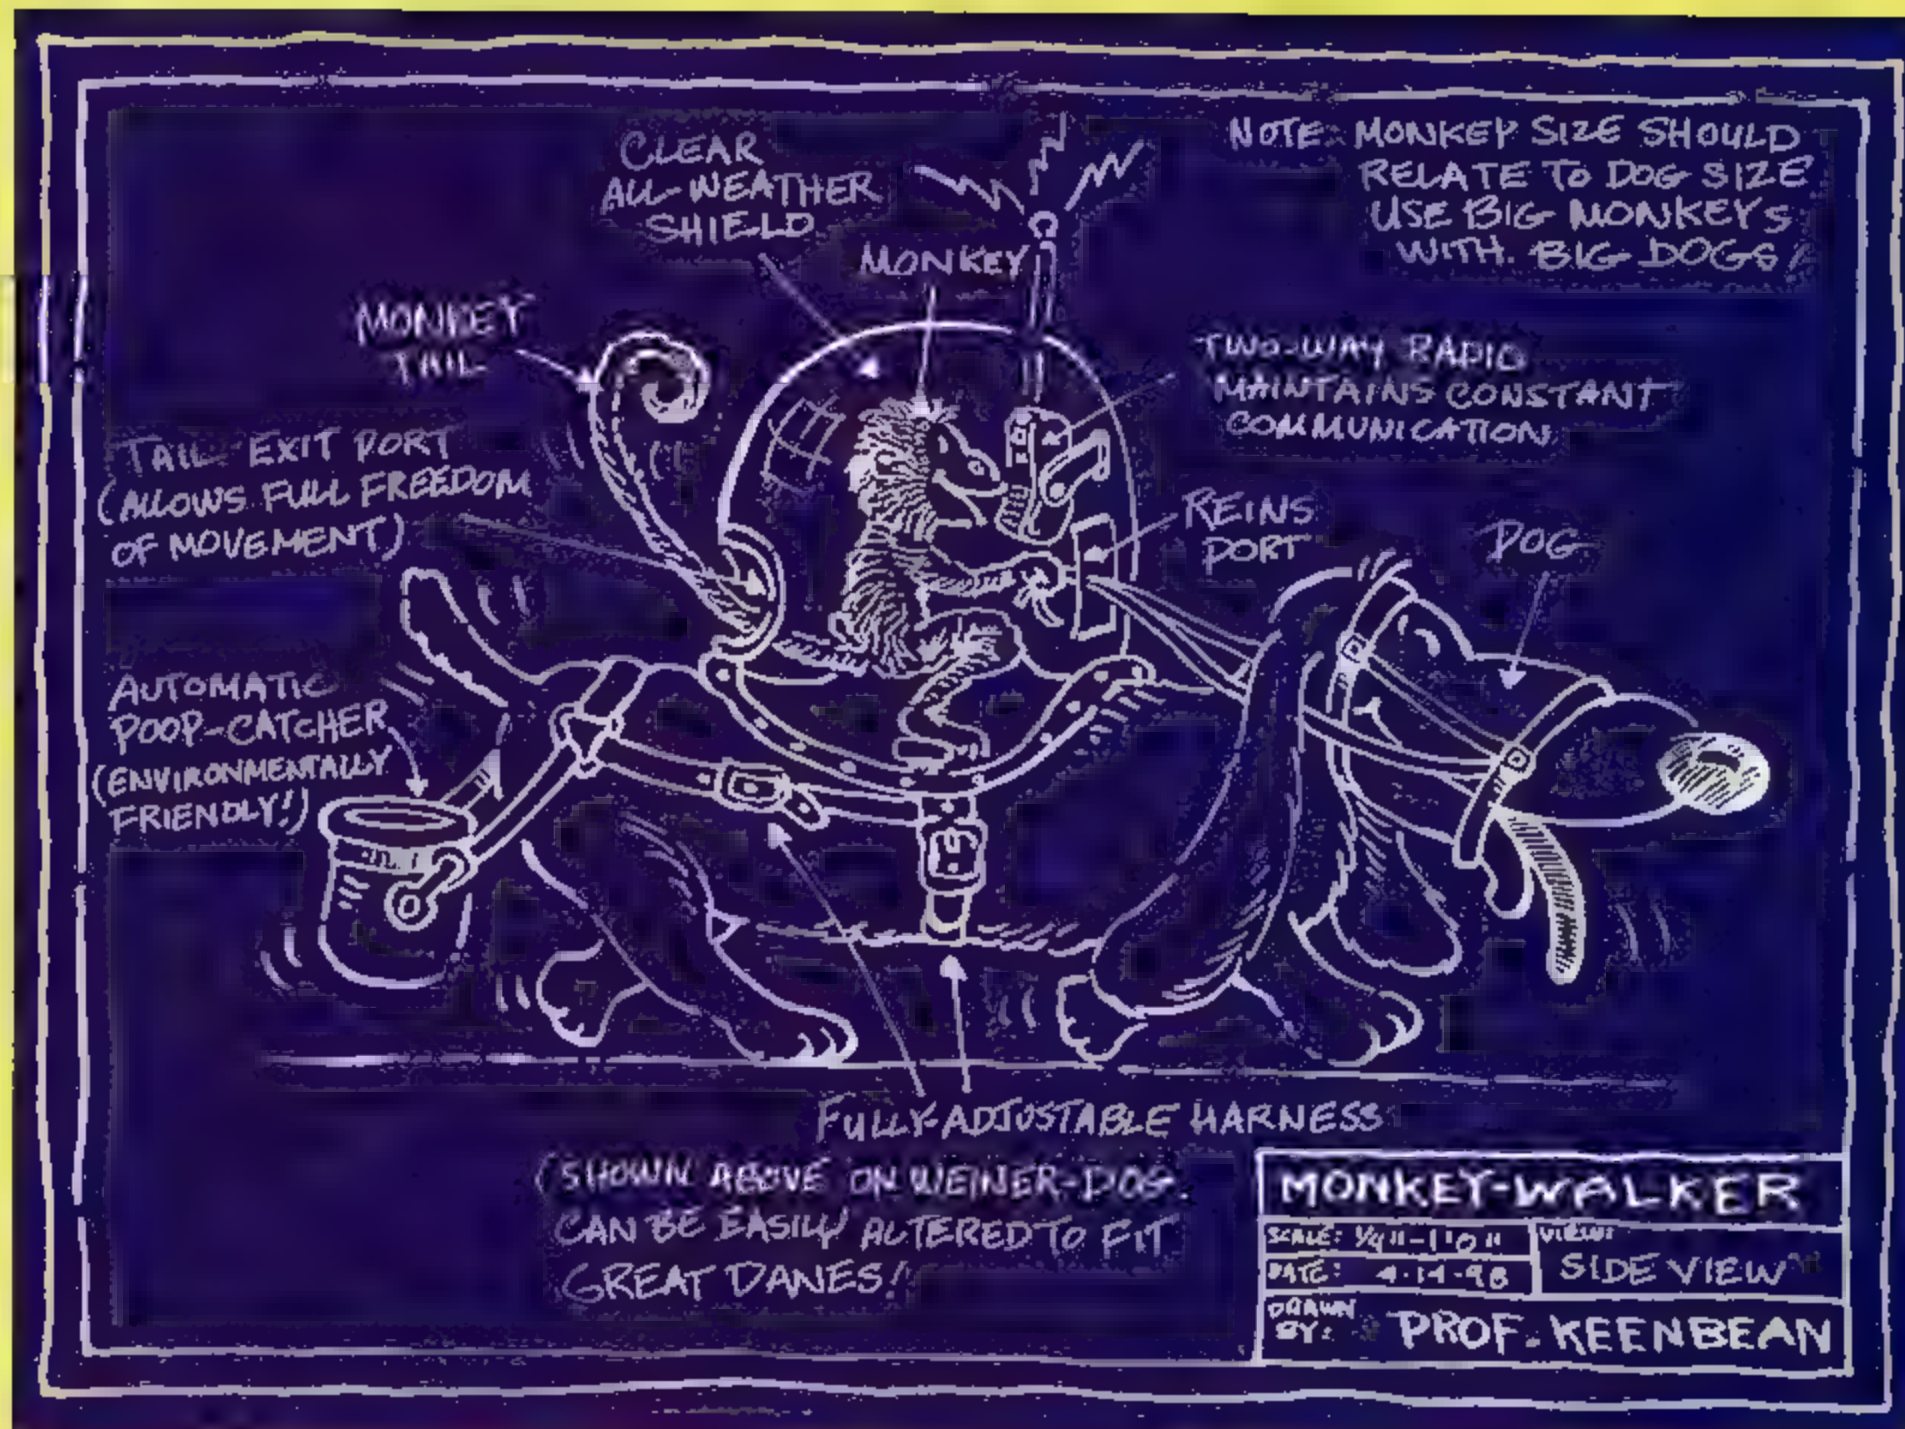

INVENTION: When you see your red-lipped relative coming, take a disposable kiss shield from the package and put the clear covering on your face. After the kiss, just peel off the shield and throw it away. Your face is as clean as before.

2. THE MONKEY-WALKER

PROBLEM: You don't want to walk the dog.

INVENTION: Thanks to the Keenbean Monkey-Walker, your dog walking days are a thing of the past. Of course, you will need to buy, train and take care of a small monkey. But a monkey is a small price to pay for progress.

3. SPINACH-MORPHOSIS MACHINE

PROBLEM: You don't want to eat spinach!

INVENTION: My Spinach-Morphosis Machine turns spinach into fun-to-eat junk food! With my machine, spinach is turned into chocolate bars, cookies and cakes. Right now, I'm working on a way to turn spinach into clothing, but green isn't really my best color.

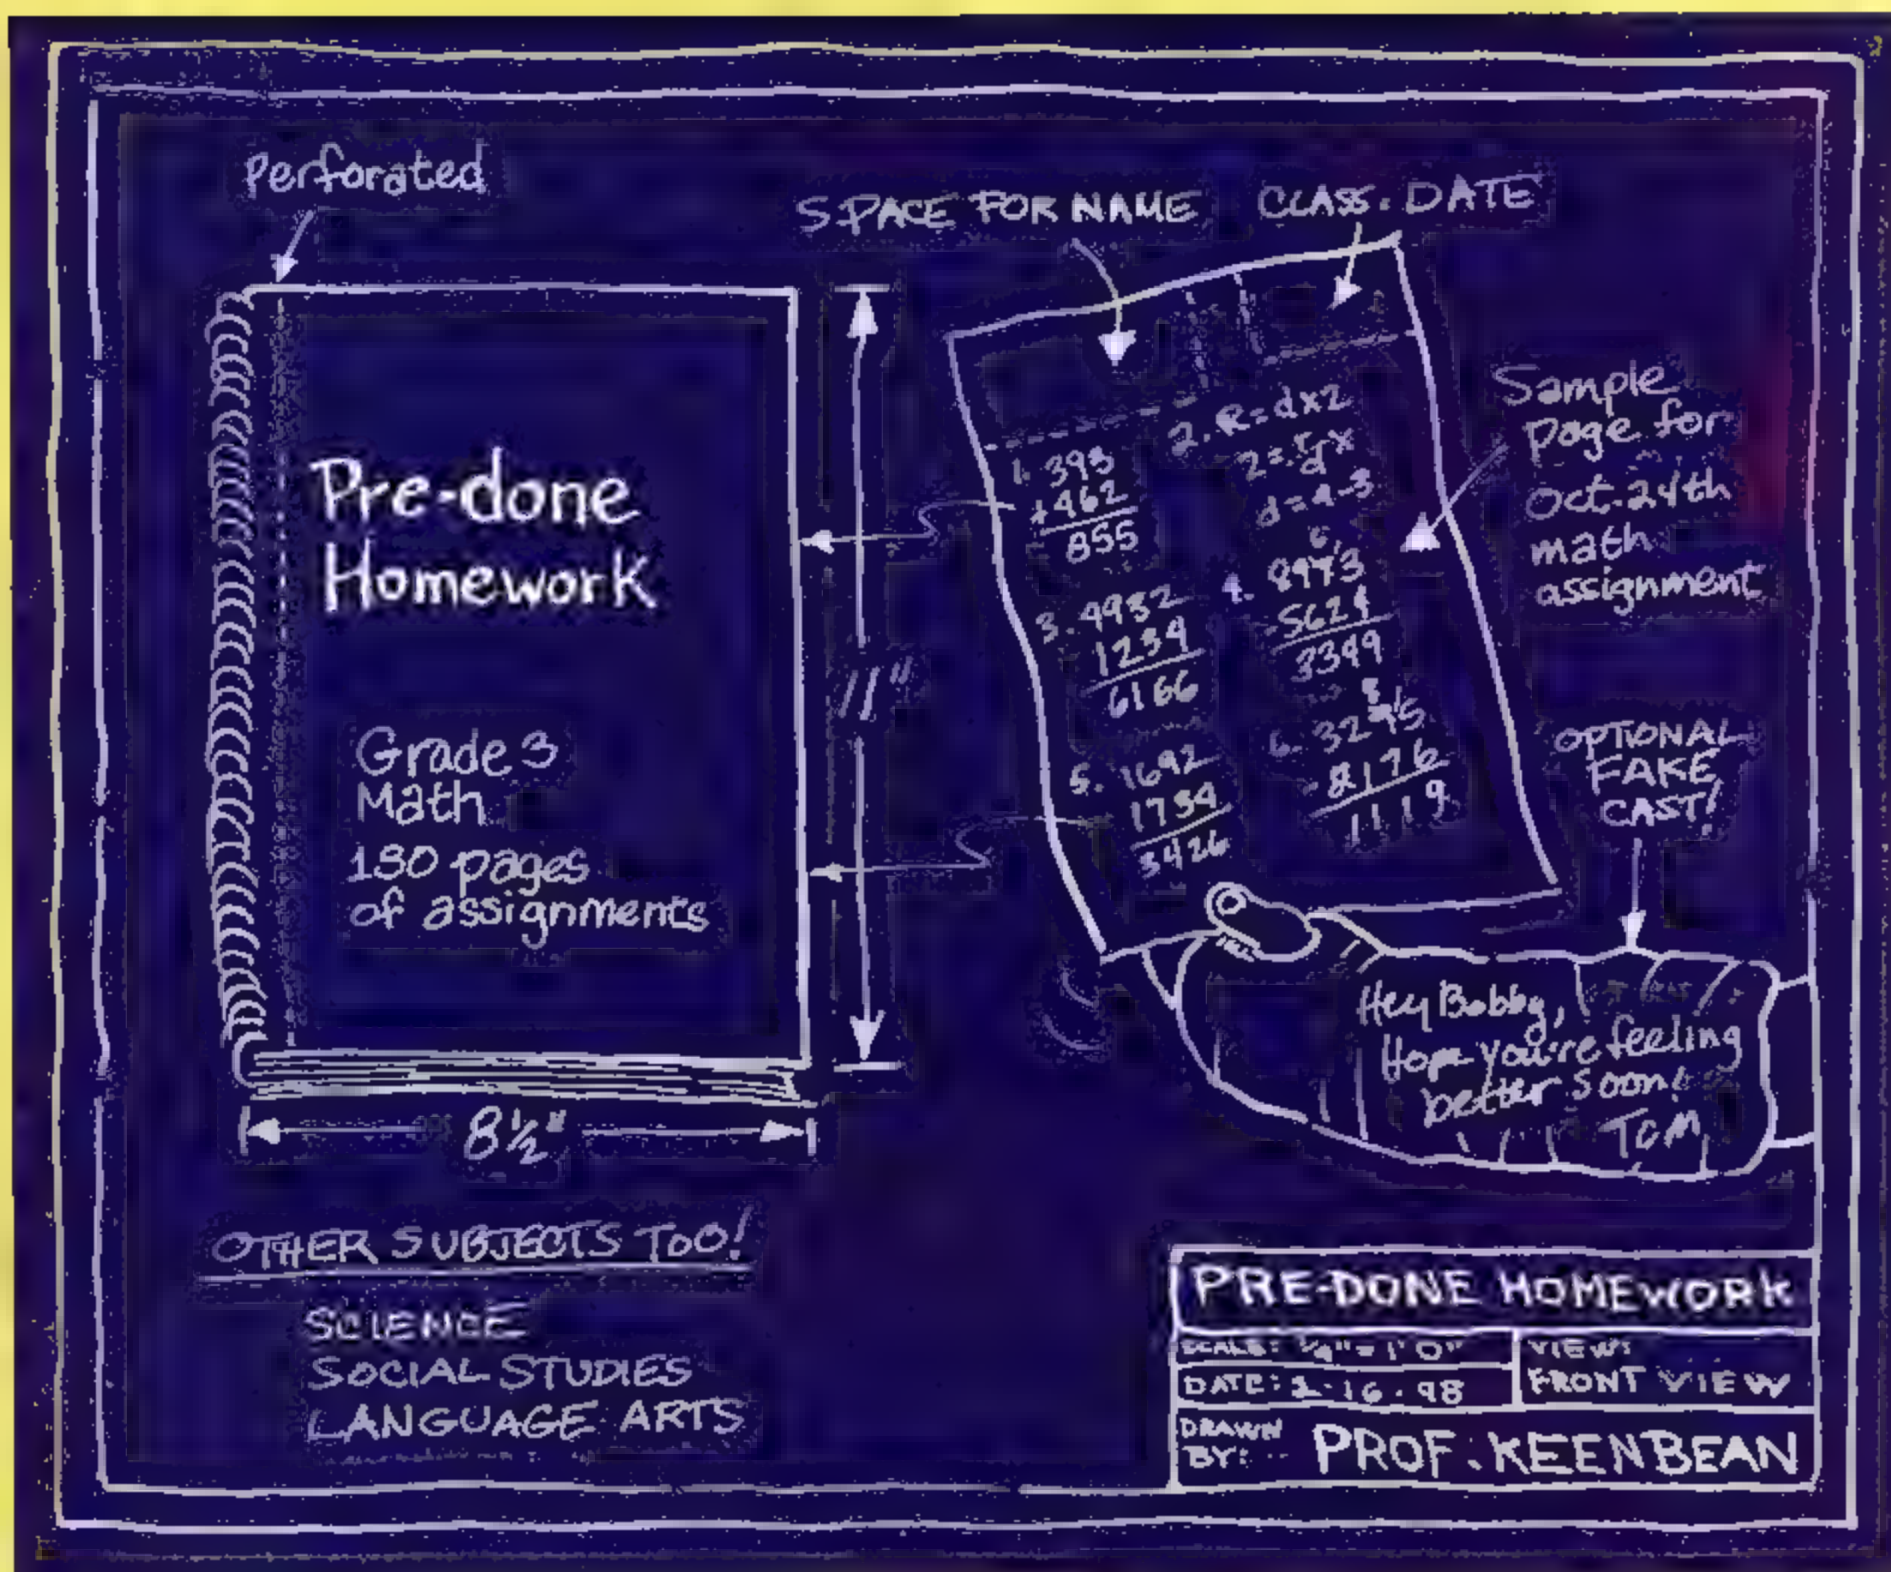

4. PRE-PRINT-ED HOMEWORK

PROBLEM: You don't want to do your homework.

INVENTION: Pre-done Homework.

That's right, I've developed special pre-done homework books-complete with little doodles in the margins. Just rip out the necessary page and hand it in. Worried that it won't match your handwriting?

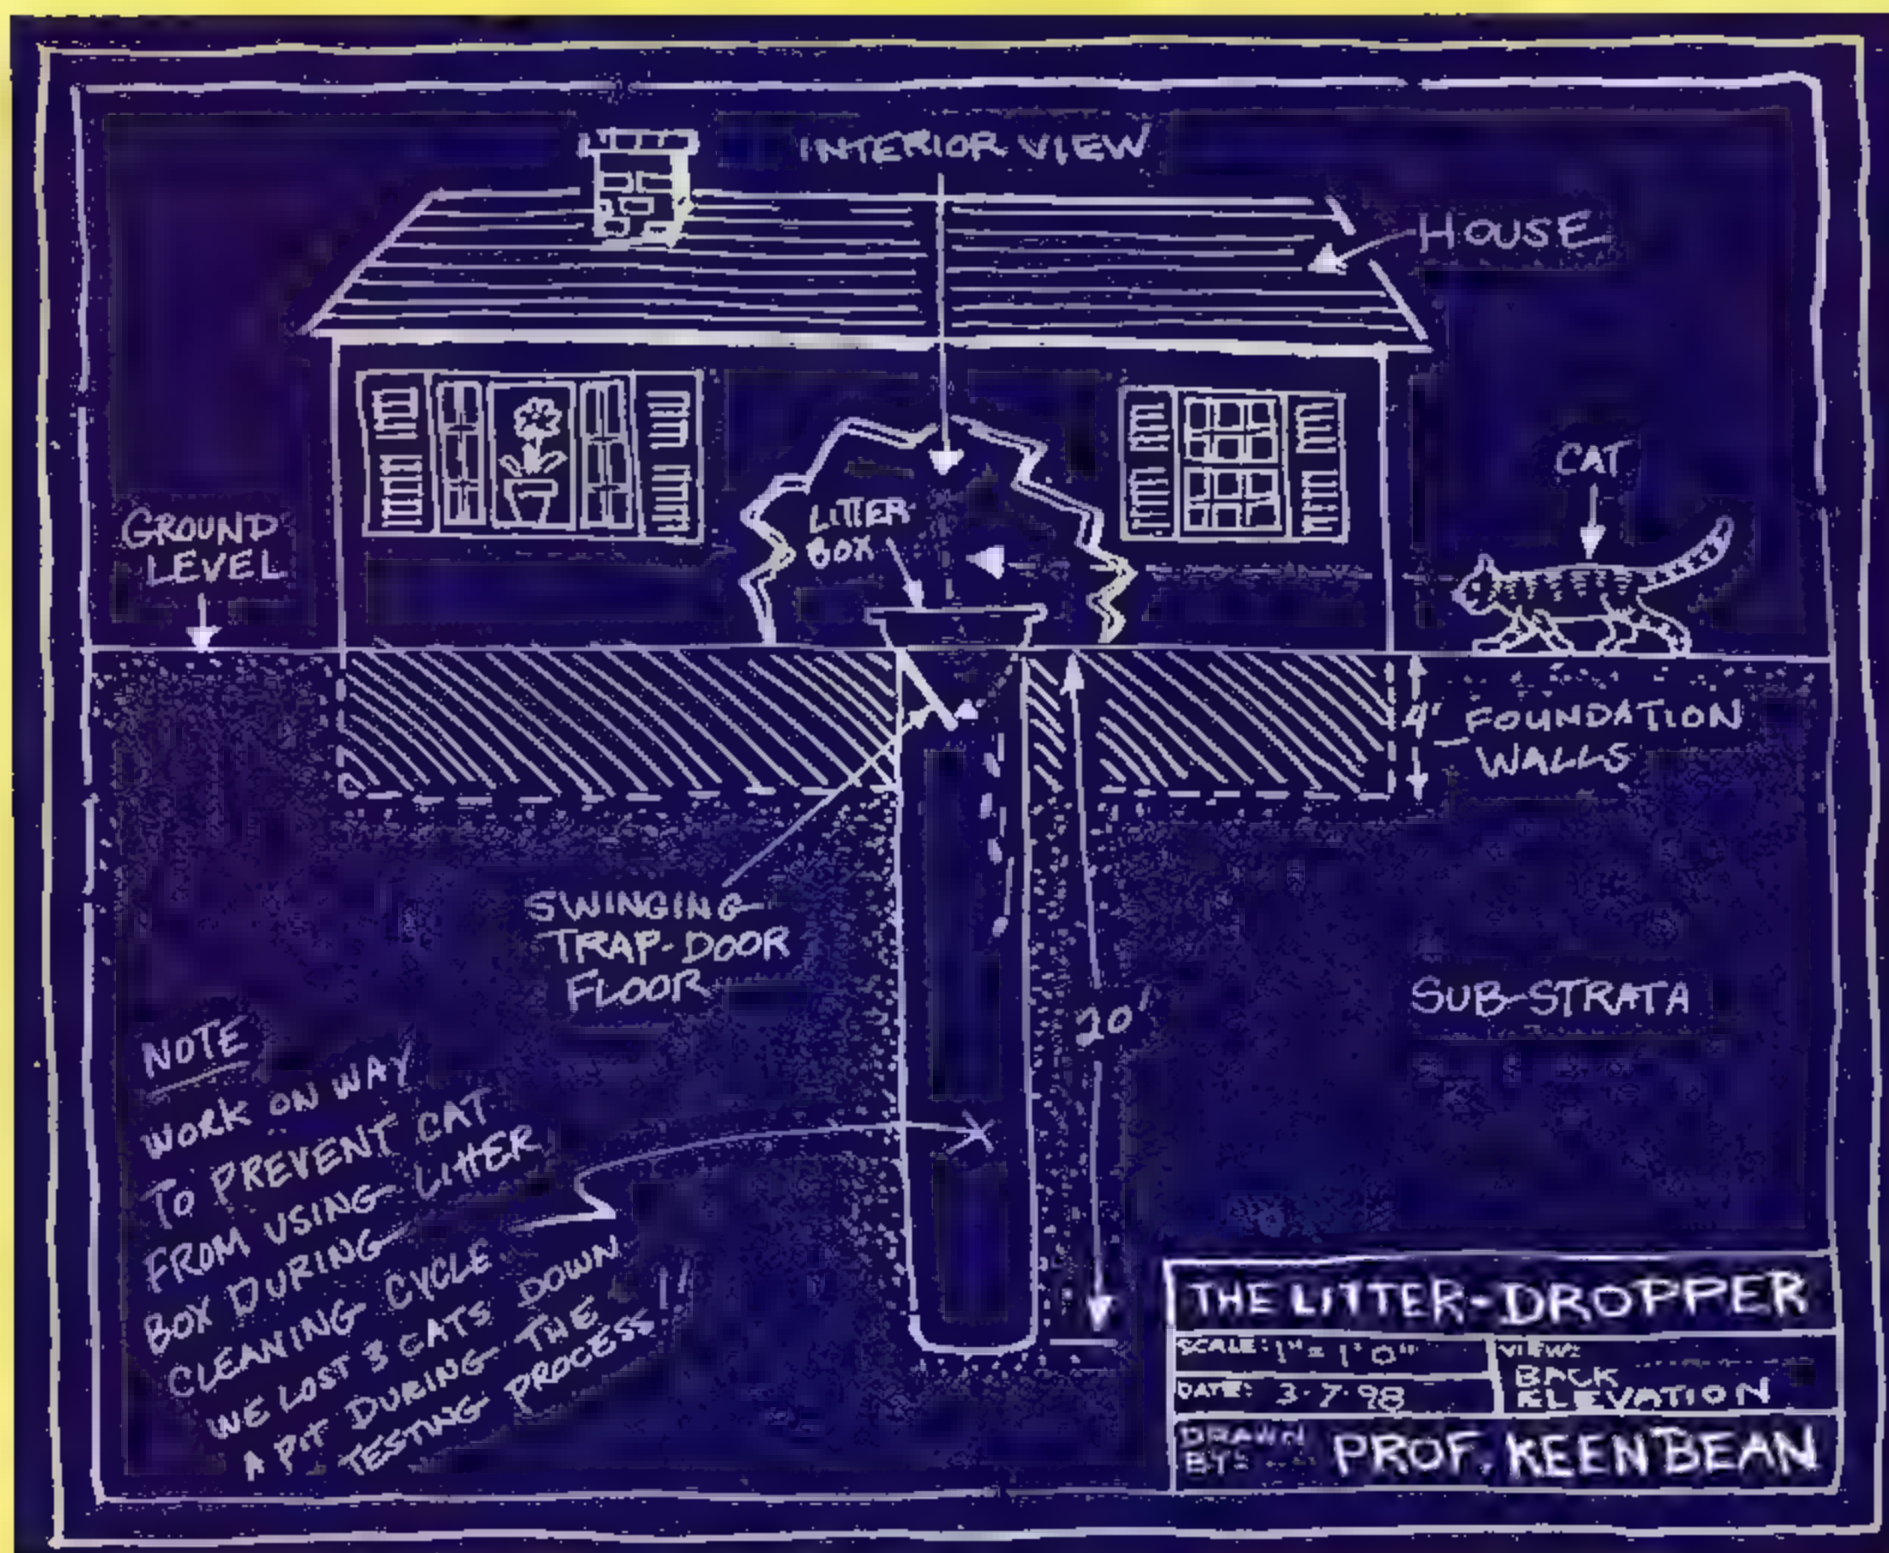

Use my special fake arm cast so your teacher will think you did your homework writing with your other hand.

5. THE LITTER-DROPPER

PROBLEM: Everyone hates cleaning the litter box.

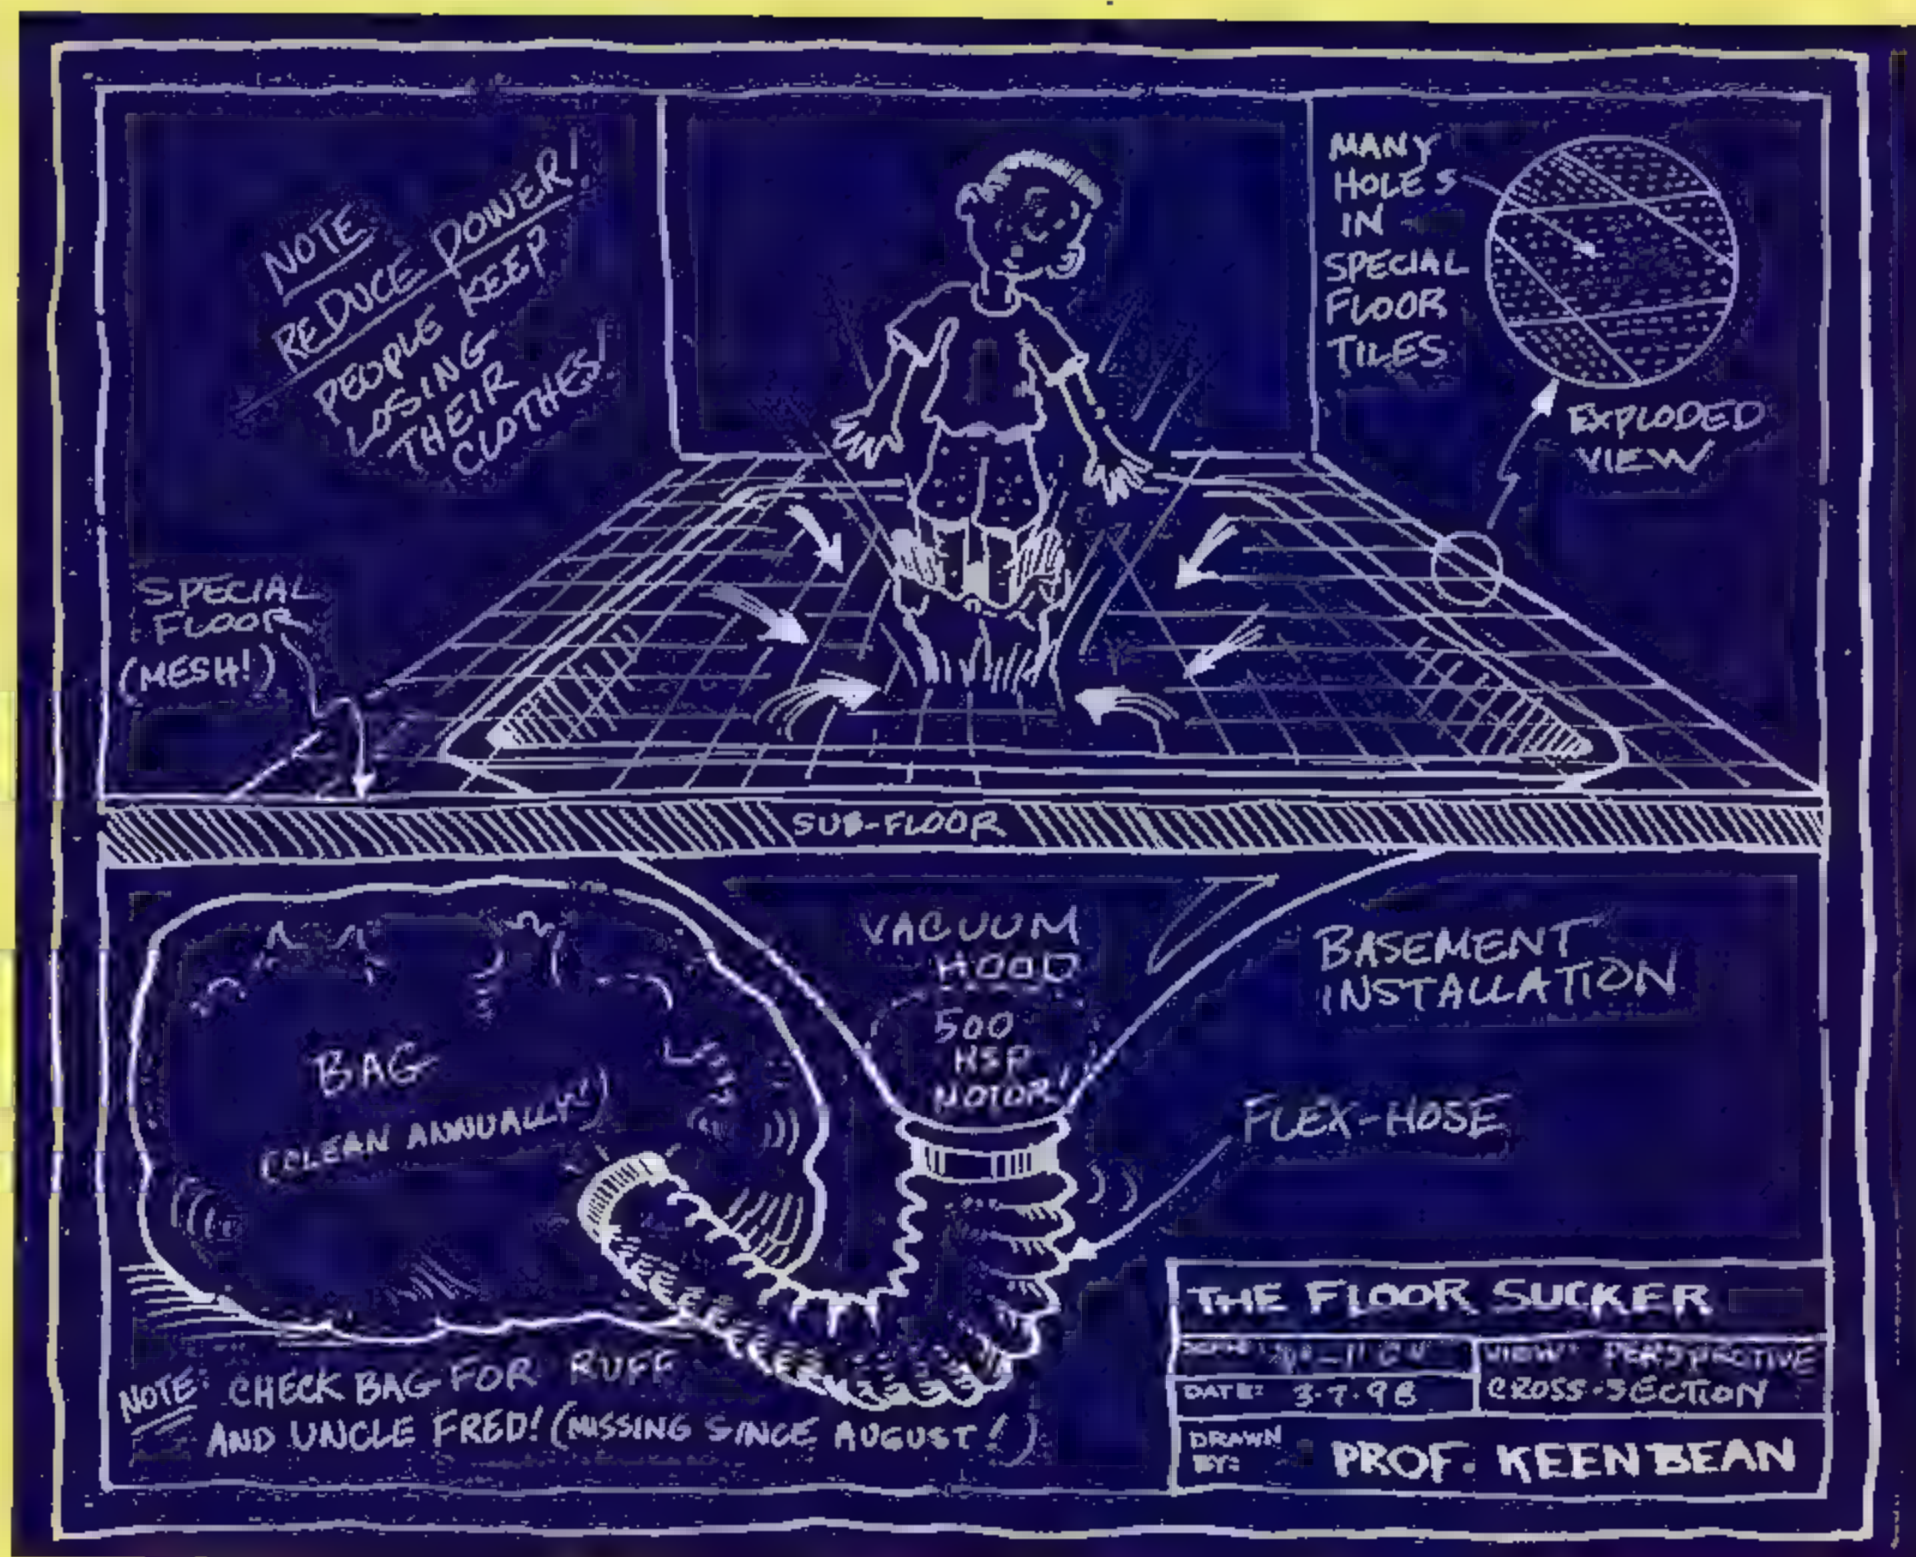

INVENTION: The new Litter-Dropper litter box empties itself.

6. THE FLOOR SUCKER

PROBLEM: Your parents want you to help vacuum the floor.

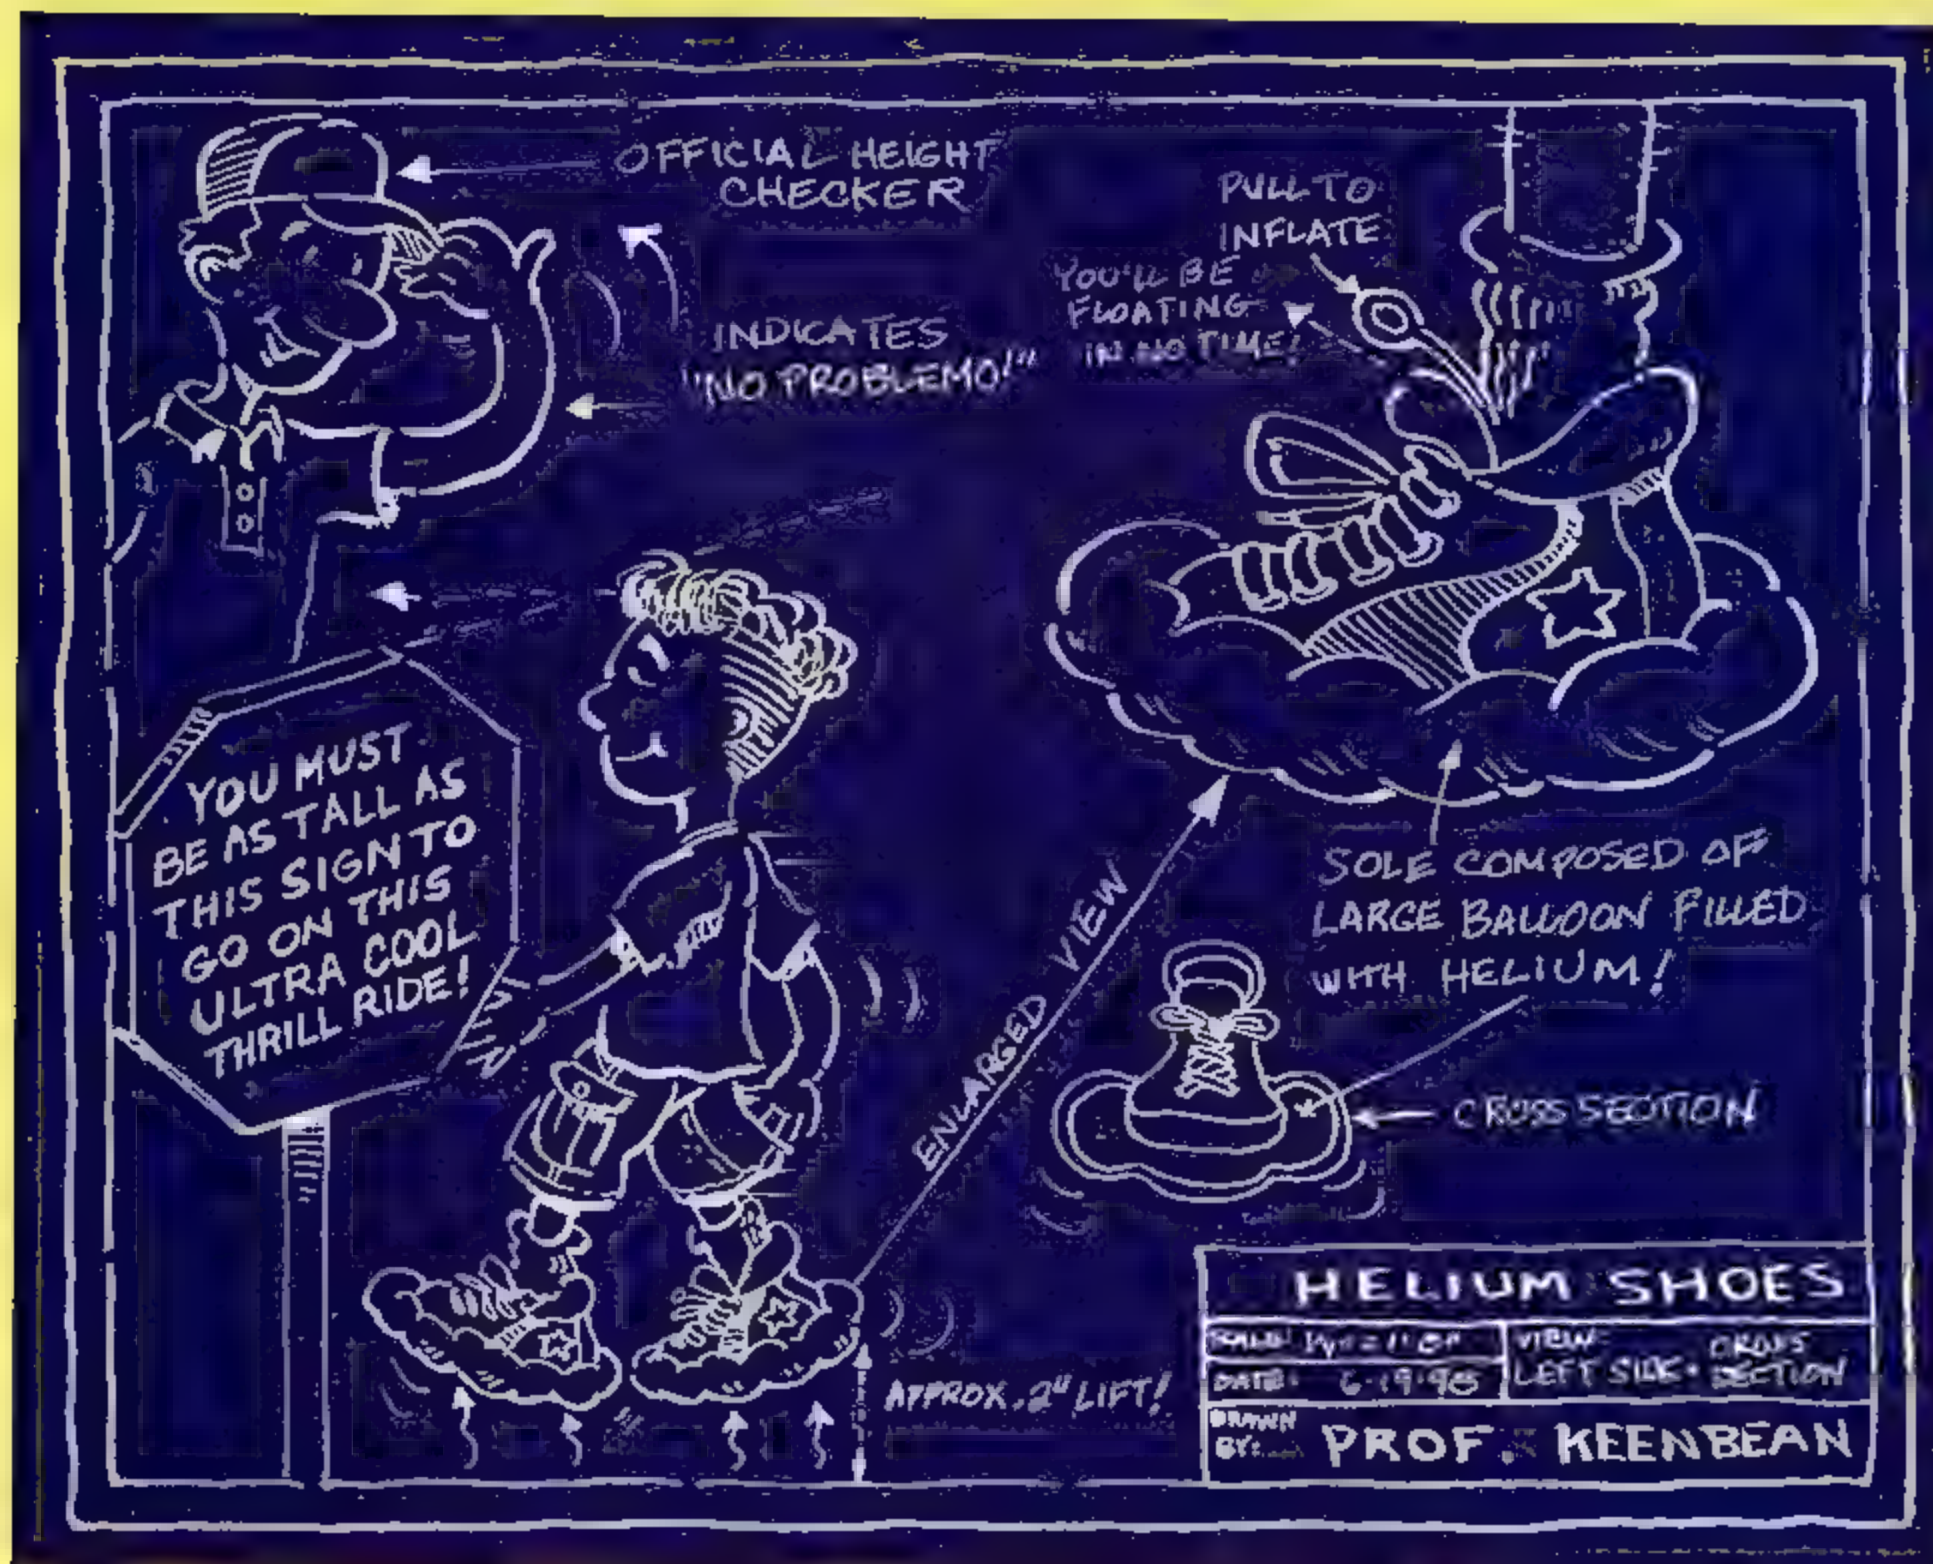

INVENTION: The Floor Sucker will replace all of those old fashioned vacuum cleaners kids have been helping their parents push around for so many years. The Floor Sucker is an incredibly powerful vacuum cleaner built right under the floor. A flip of a switch and all of your dirt gets sucked under you.

7. HELIUM SHOES

PROBLEM: You're not tall enough for the cool rides at the amusement parks.

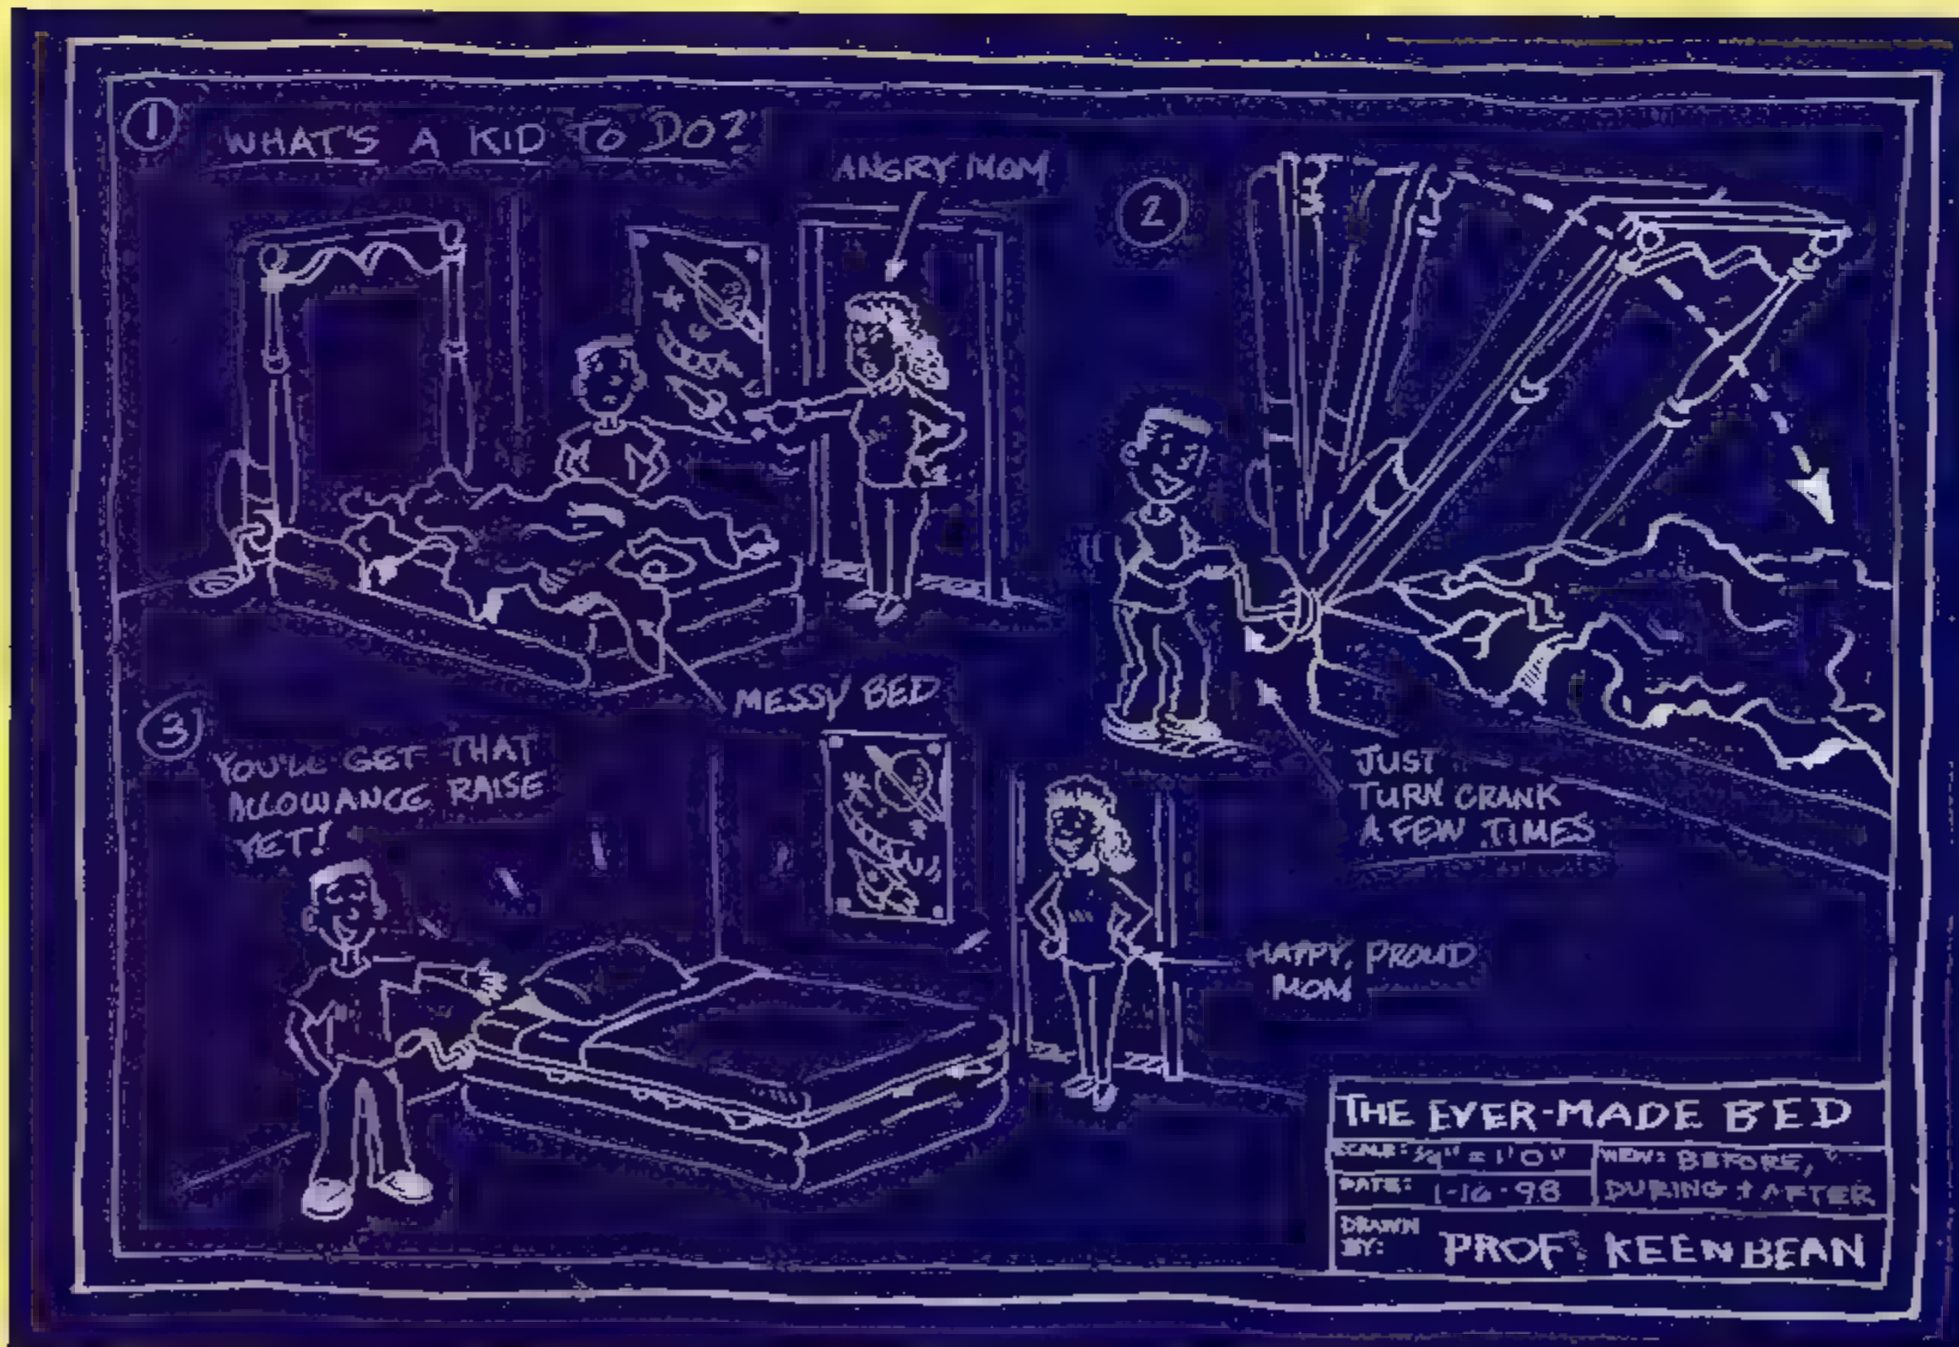

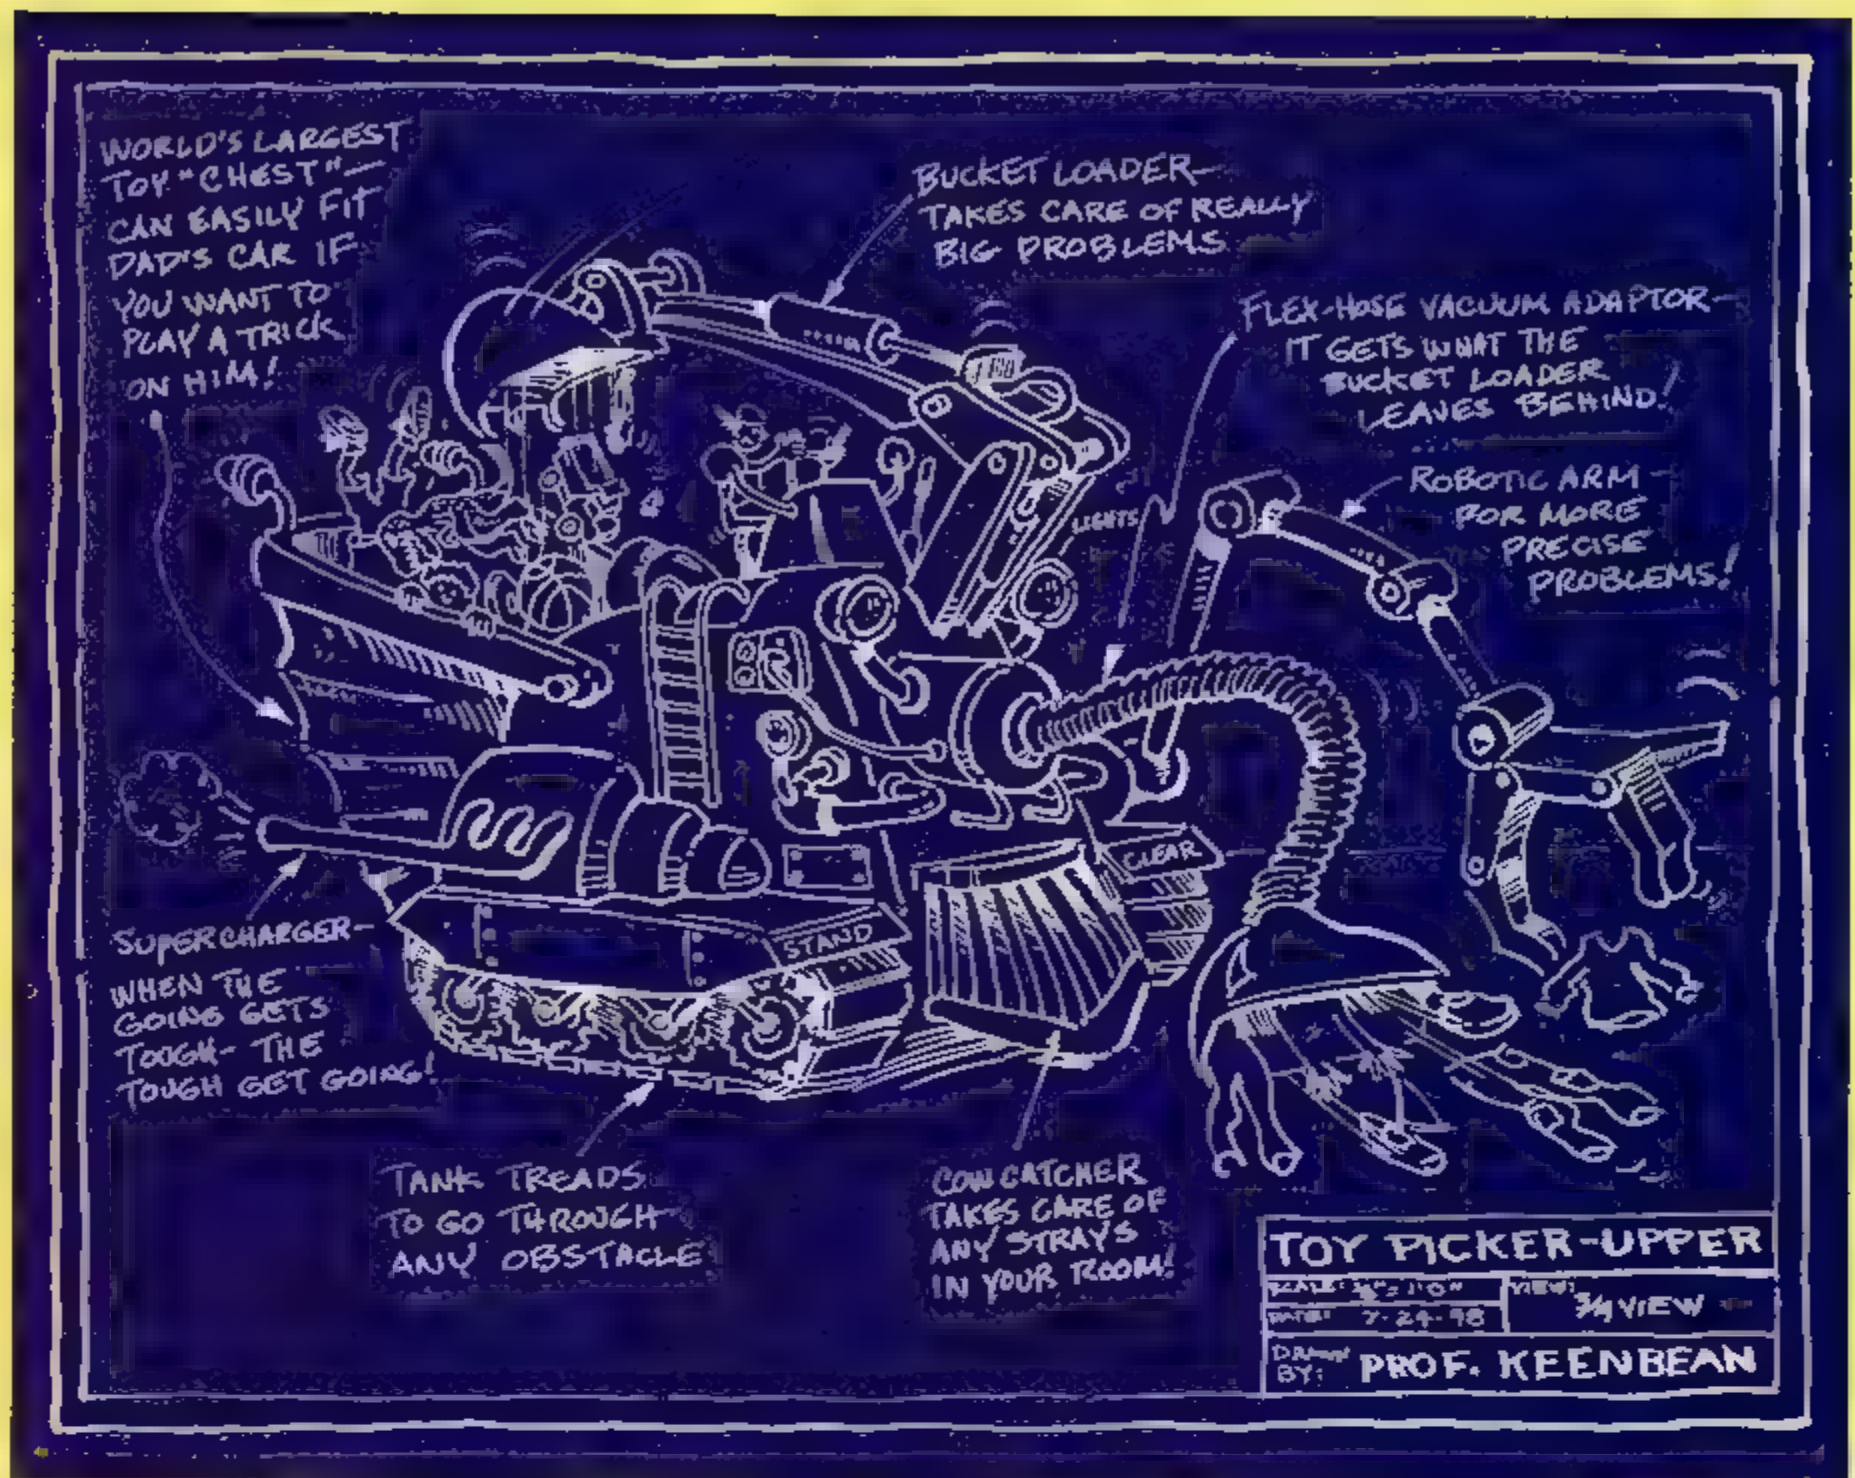

INVENTION: Helium Shoes! These new shoes contain just enough helium to allow its wearer to hover 6-12 inches above the ground. Thus, when you stand next to an amusement park ride's height marker, you will appear to be well over the minimum height. They're also handy for reaching high shelves.

8. TOY PICKER-UPPER

PROBLEM: Your mom's always telling you to pick up your toys.

INVENTION: The Toy Picker-upper. This is a handy gadget designed to automatically pick up all of the toys you leave around the house. The one problem so far, it picks up the toy whether you are finished playing with it or not. During our test process, 5 kids ended up inside the machine. Fortunately, they had many toys in there to keep them busy during the 15 hours it took to get them out of there. The Toy Picker-upper will be in your home as soon as we can lower its size (987 pounds) and its cost $339,778.98.

9. THE EVER-MADE BED

PROBLEM: Your folks keep pestering you to make your bed.

INVENTION: The Ever-Made Bed. Why make your bed? It's only going to get messed up again when you go to sleep. Still, parents keep insisting, so I have developed a bed that practically makes itself.

Little Audrey's Health Tips

Some people call me a tomboy, but what's that all about? Just 'cause I like to play sports and workout, doesn't mean I'm boyish! I like dressing up like any girl, but I'm also aggressive on the ballfield and I love sports!

It's the ballfield part I want to talk to you about right now.

Some folks look at the way I handle a baseball bat and kick a soccer ball and say that it's easy for me. They think I'm naturally good at sports. Well, I'm here to tell you that they're full of beans!

I worked and still work hard at my ballplaying abilities. I practice all sports I play and I always make sure that I do stretching exercises before and after each game. Stretching my arms, legs and back is important to me because this prevents many injuries. And that little time spent stretching is far less time than I'd spend on the bench if I got injured. Pretty smart, eh?

I also follow a pretty balanced diet. I eat lots of food from the five food groups. All food is broken up into categories. My health teacher told me it's important to eat a balanced mix of fats, dairy, protein, fruit & vegetables and grains. I know this sounds really boring, but once you get into the habit of eating good things, you don't even realize that you're doing something good for yourself. (I hate to admit it, but I now love brussel sprouts!)

To be perfectly honest, I do sometimes splurge on pizza, candy and ice cream. What am I, looney? But you know what? Now that I eat less junk food, it somehow tastes so much better to me. Try it!

Well, those are just a few of my training tips. Play ball!

LIMBER UP WITH LITTLE AUDREY

1 With one hand on the wall, pull back slowly and gently on the ankle of each foot.

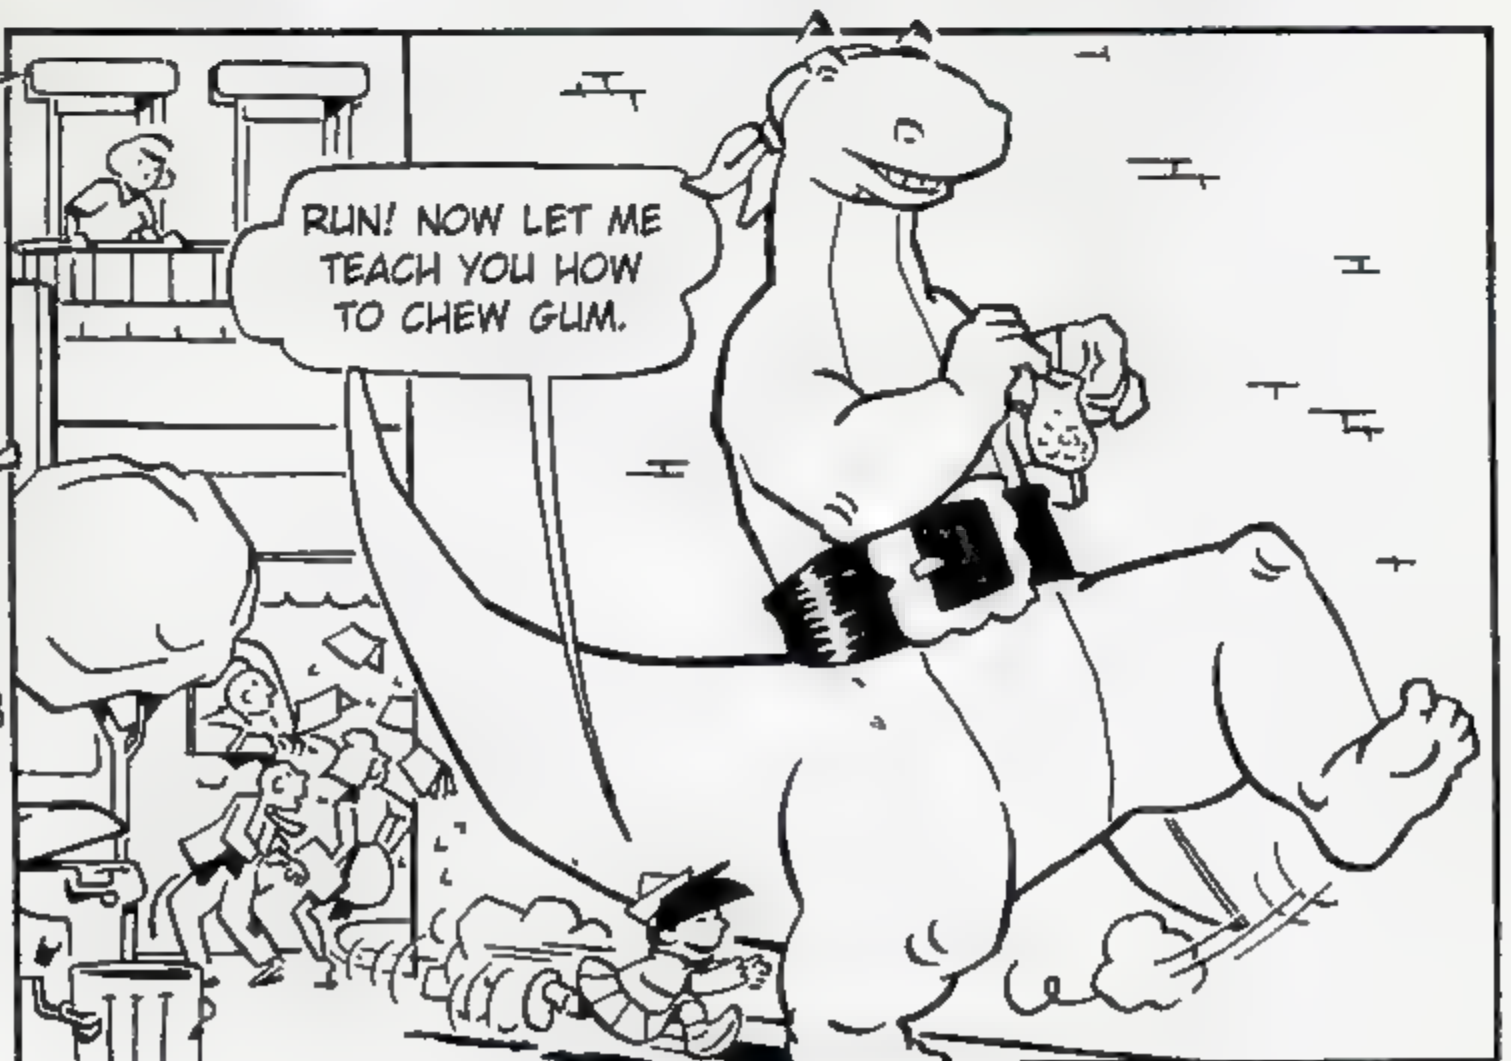

2 With your knees straight, extend your arms as close to the floor as you can.

3 Holding your ankles, pull your thighs as close to yourself as possible.

4 Holding your ankle, pull each knee as close to your chest as you can.

YOU CHEW AND THEN BLOW.

OH, I THINK I GAVE YOU TOO MUCH!

I THINK I REALLY GOT US IN A JAM THIS TIME, TOM!

DADDY!

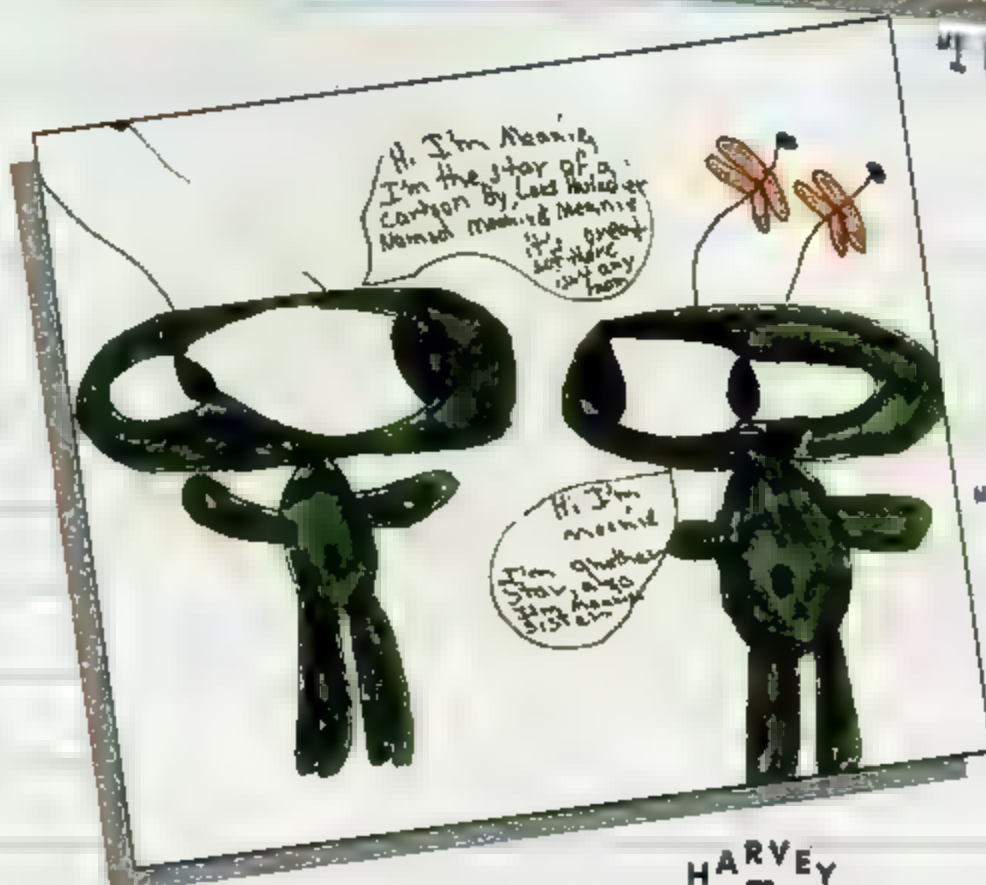

DANIEL TORRES

Look, Mom, I made it Myself!

Lars Harlacher is a ten-year-old boy who lives in Long Valley, New Jersey with his mom, dad, and his brother, Craig. He has been drawing comics since he was very young and has always loved to come up with humorous characters. He especially likes it when his comic strips imitate real life. Brain is his autobiographical character—except Lars doesn't have a big wet nose and a long, curvy tail.

I love reading cartoons like Peanuts and Garfield. When I was very young, I decided I would give it a try, so here I am. Brain and his pal, Mark are my favorites. They actually look very much alike, but I can tell their differences. I also draw two aliens named Moonie and Meanie. I came up with their names after I saw an episode of The Lucy Show. Lucy kept saying, "Moonie is a meanie!" and it just stuck.

"I like Brain because he's a leader."

"I came up with the character Meanie after Craig started stealing my Halloween candy."

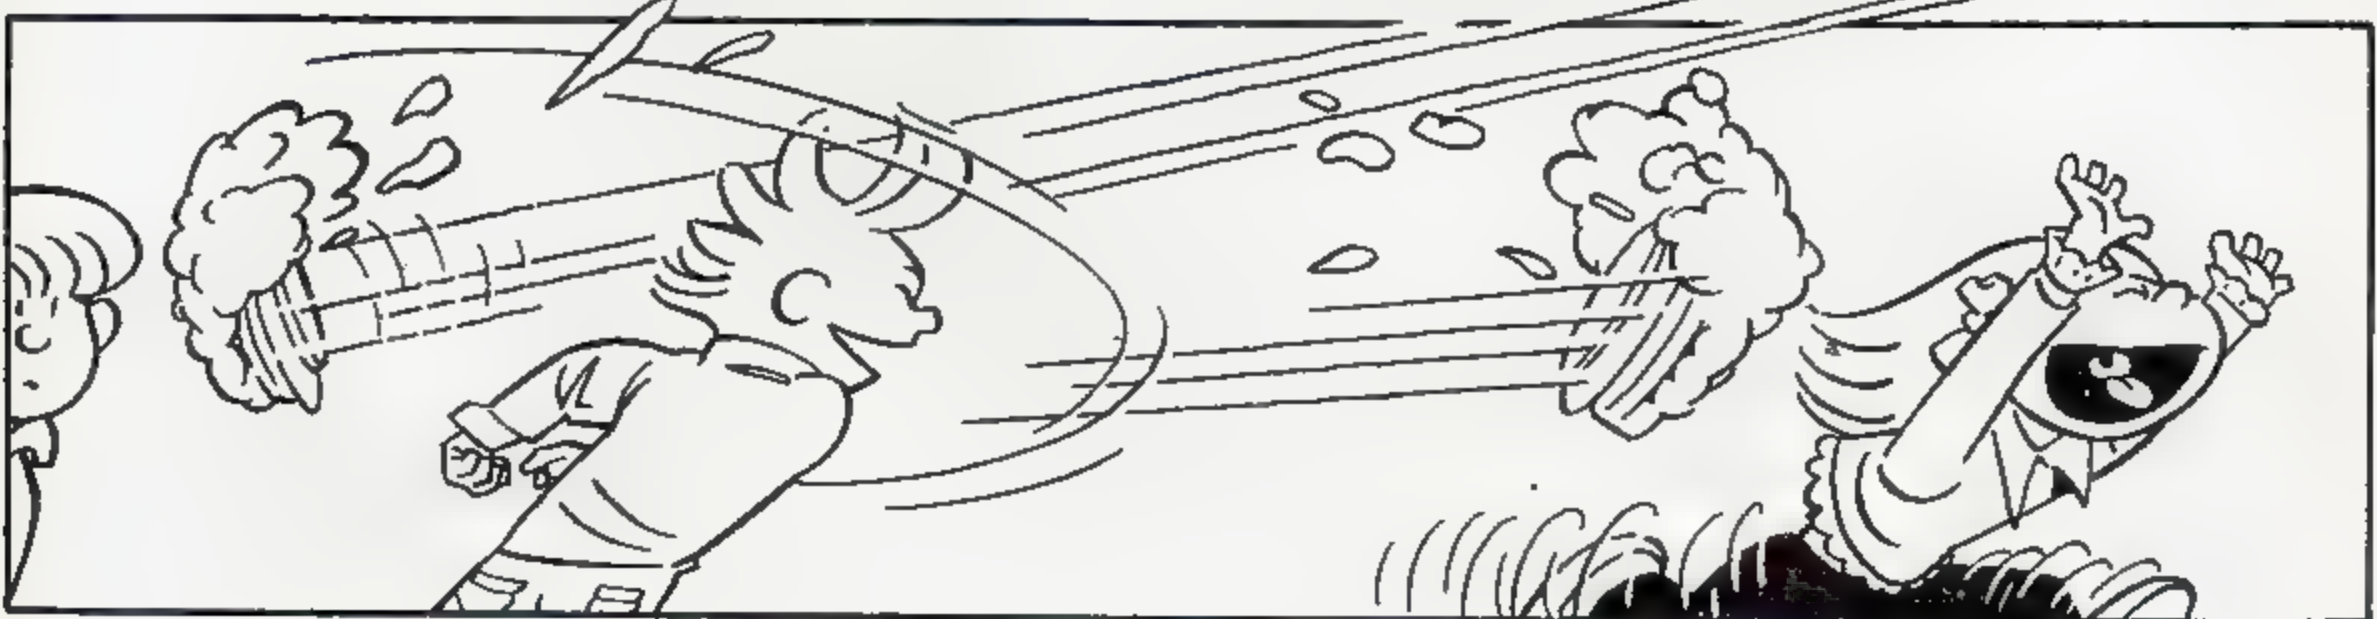

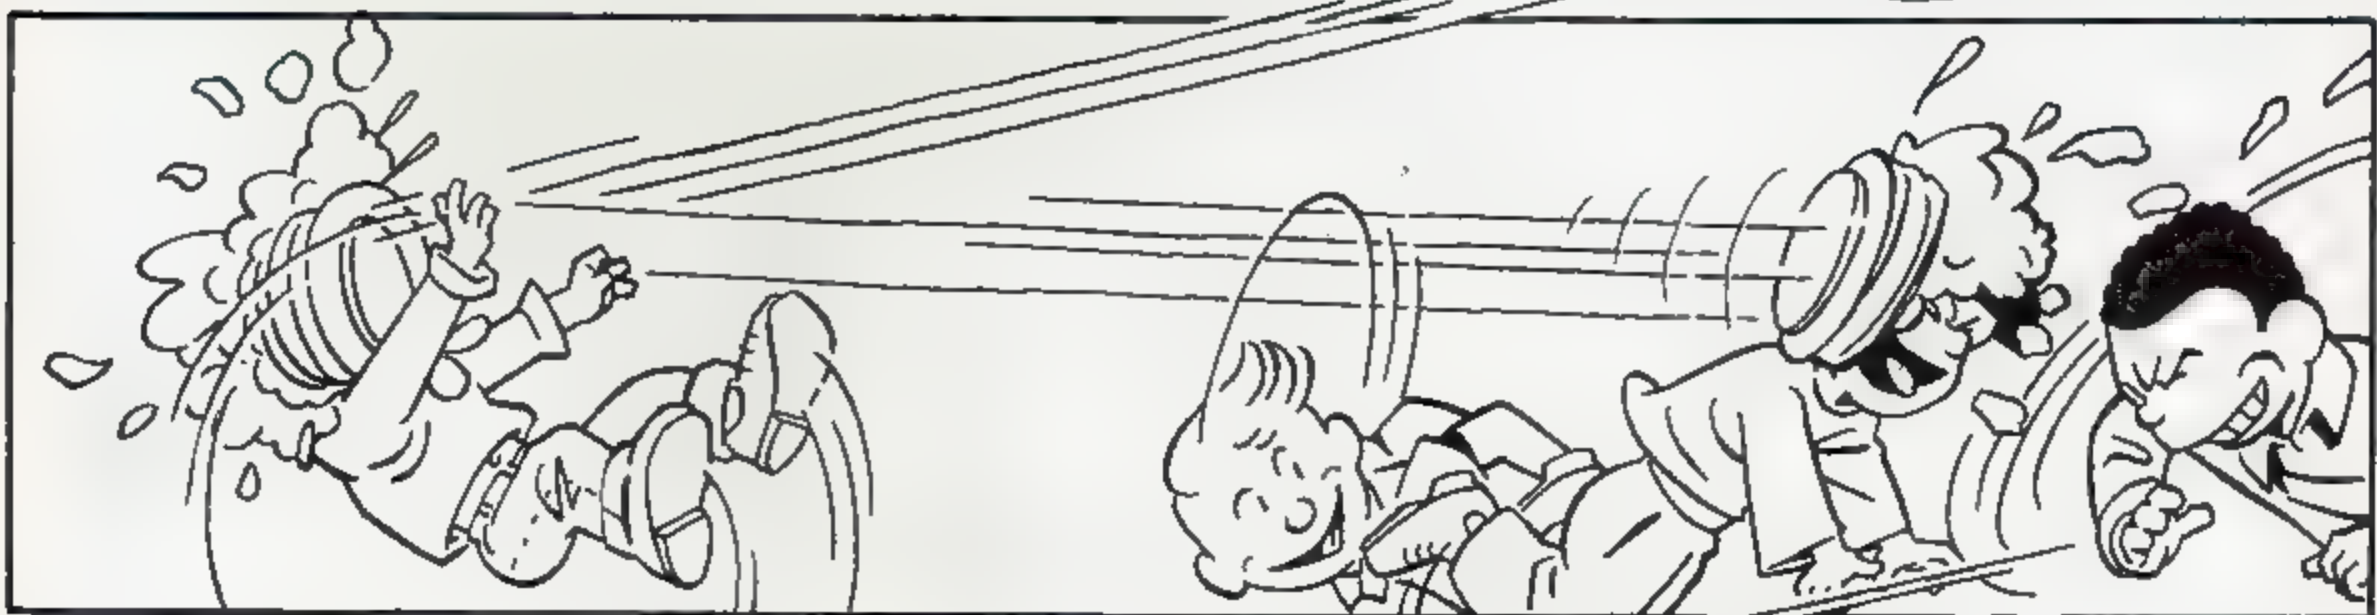

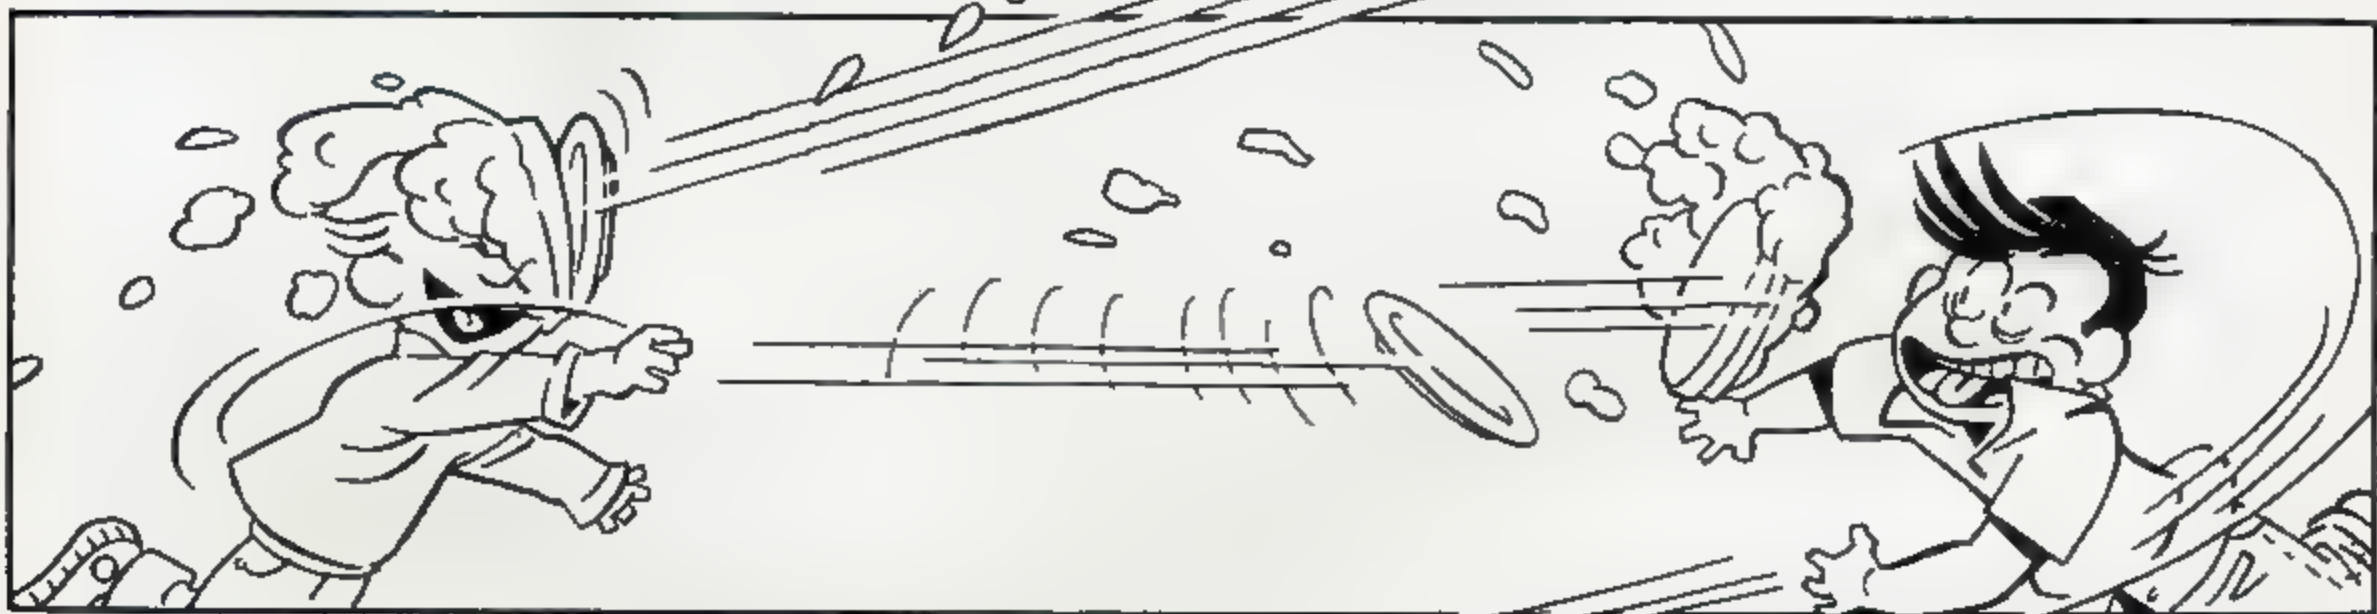

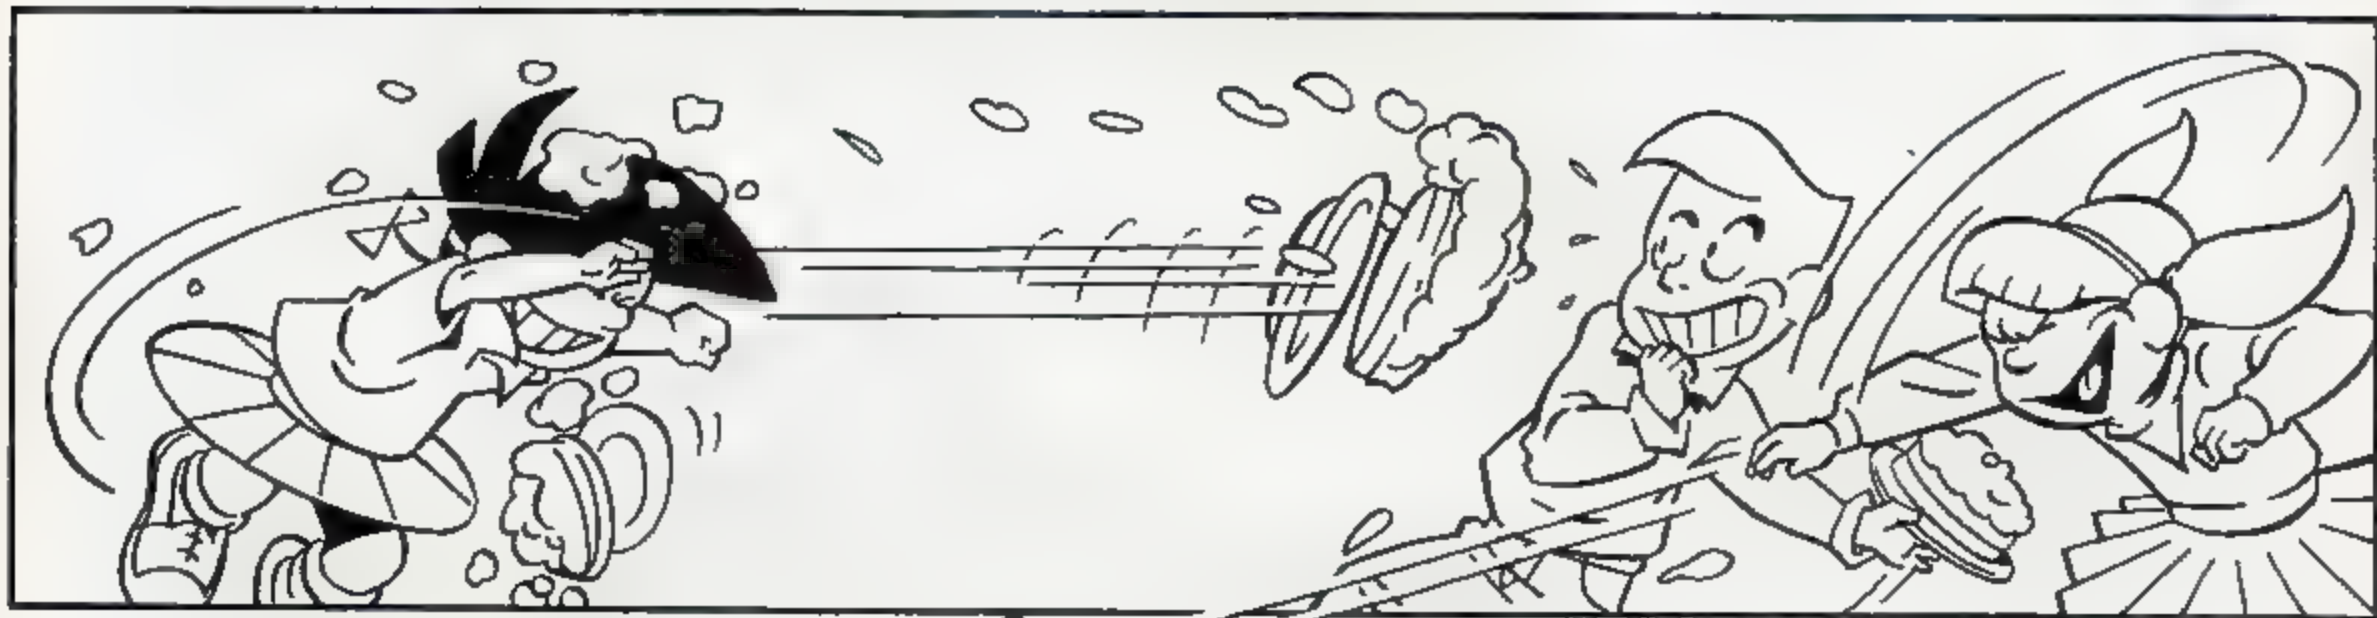

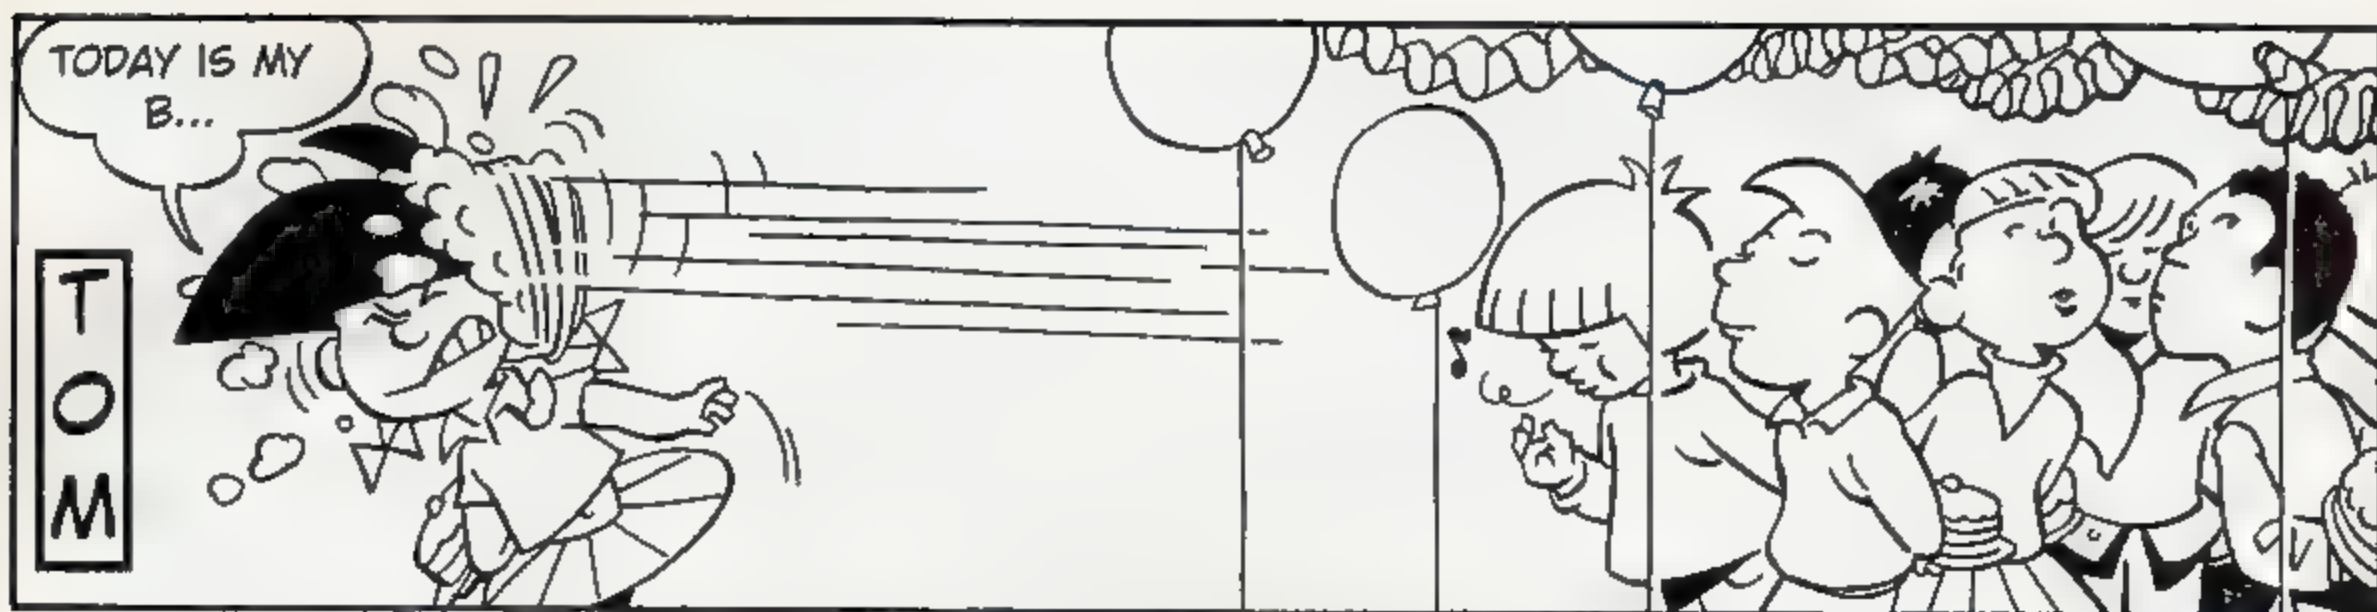

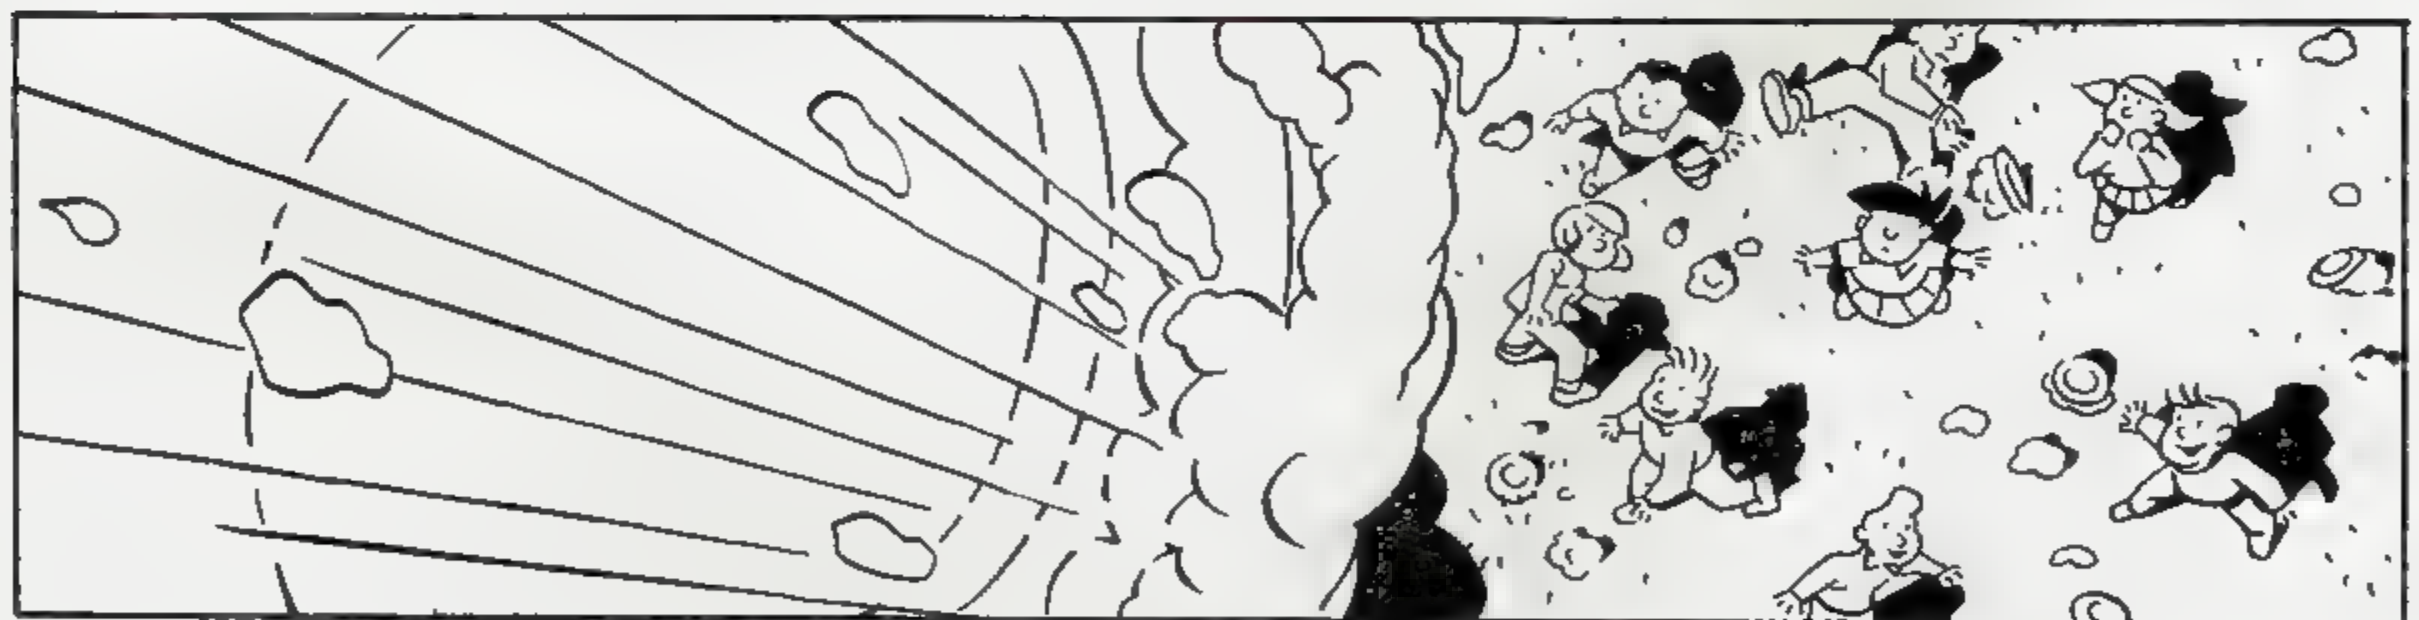

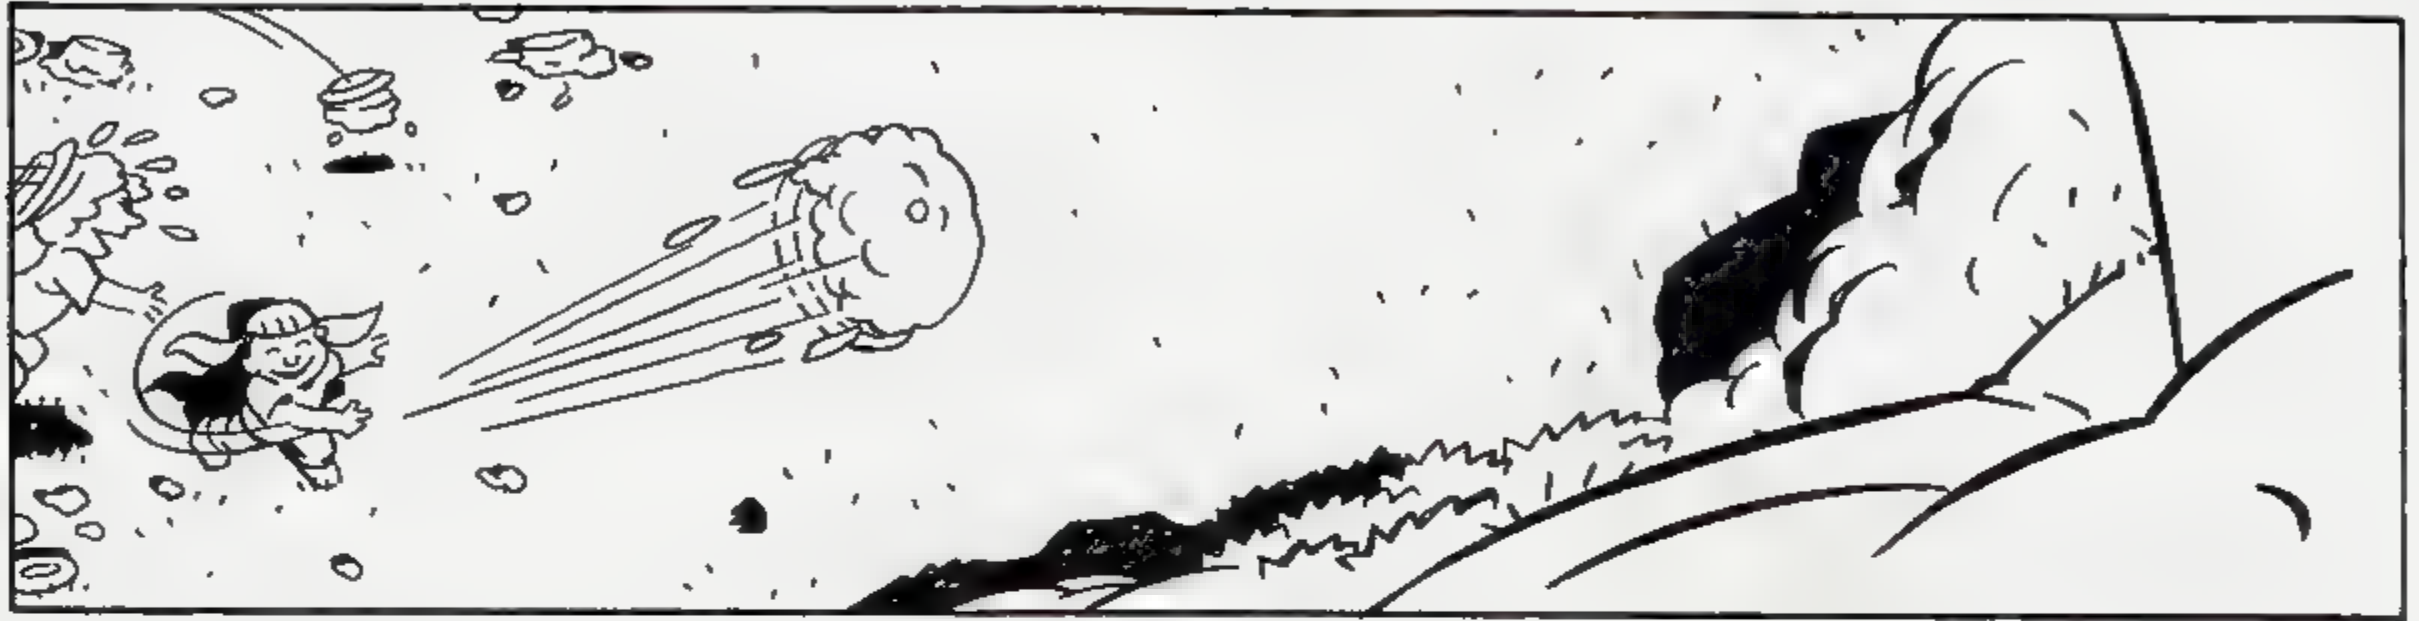

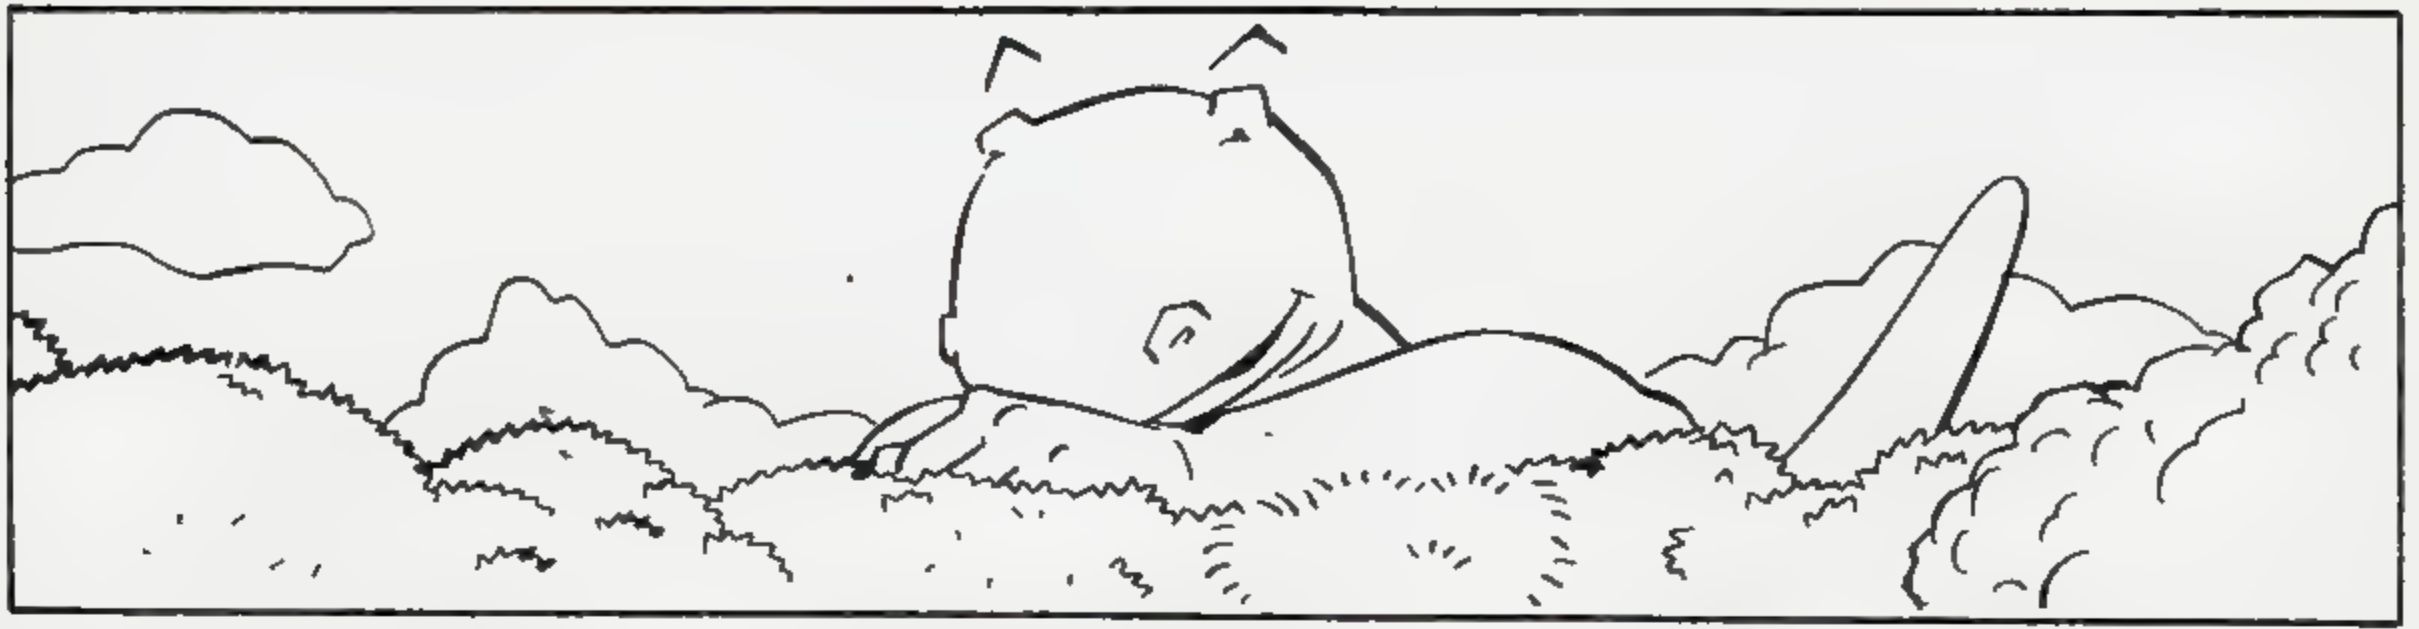

We thought since you might very well be stuck indoors because of bad winter weather, you could use some suggestions on what's in the stores to keep you happy and busy! (That's if you can get to the stores!) We showed these things to a bunch of kids and this is what they had to say....

PENCIL Dreams

A Frazzled Fairy Tale

Art by B.K. Taylor • Story by B.K. Taylor and Tex Ragsdale

Molly Macintosh was a dreamer -- but she was also an artist. Unlike most kids, she could put her dreams down on paper. She spent every spare minute drawing. For Molly, when she drew, her dreams almost came to life!

So one day in school, when she should have been studying, she decided that she would rather live out a fairy tale. She looked across the aisle at Jason Fogelmeyer, the boy she had a crush on, and she imagined him as a handsome prince ... with herself as Cinderella. Or rather, Cindermolly! What fun, she thought! But there was only one problem: she couldn't quite remember how the story went. She started to draw anyway ...

Cindermolly lived in a castle. Not as big as the king and queen's castle, of course, but still a castle. She lived there with her parents and two bratty brothers, Winston and Spencer. Winston was a little younger than she was, and Spencer a little older. They spent a lot of their time figuring out ways to torment her. A favorite prank of theirs was to get into some kind of mischief and make sure that she also got blamed!

And that's exactly what happened one morning. Winston and Spencer were having a food fight in the castle kitchen. As Cindermolly walked in for breakfast, she ended up with egg on her face -- and all over her clothes!

Her brothers howled with laughter, but her parents didn't see anything funny about it. They grounded Winston and Spencer ... and Cindermolly right along with them.

That meant she didn't get to go to the big party at the prince's castle -- and all the other kids in the neighborhood were going. Cindermolly had to stay in her room; she was totally bummed. So she closed her eyes and made a wish! Then, to her amazement, a strange looking woman appeared, dressed in a sweatsuit! "Ta da!" she said.

She stopped Cindermolly as she ran for the door to call her parents. "Hold it, honey," she said. "I'm your fairy godmother! Call me Rhoda." "You're a fairy godmother?" Cindermolly exclaimed. "Well, you caught me at a bad time," said Rhoda. "I look more like a fairy godmother when I have makeup on. I was working out. Y'know, sweating with the fairies!"

Rhoda continued: "I'm here to help you out, kid. Let me guess -- you want to go to the big party, you don't have anything to wear and no way to get there, right? I get this wish all the time." "Uh, yeah. Something like that," said Cindermolly.

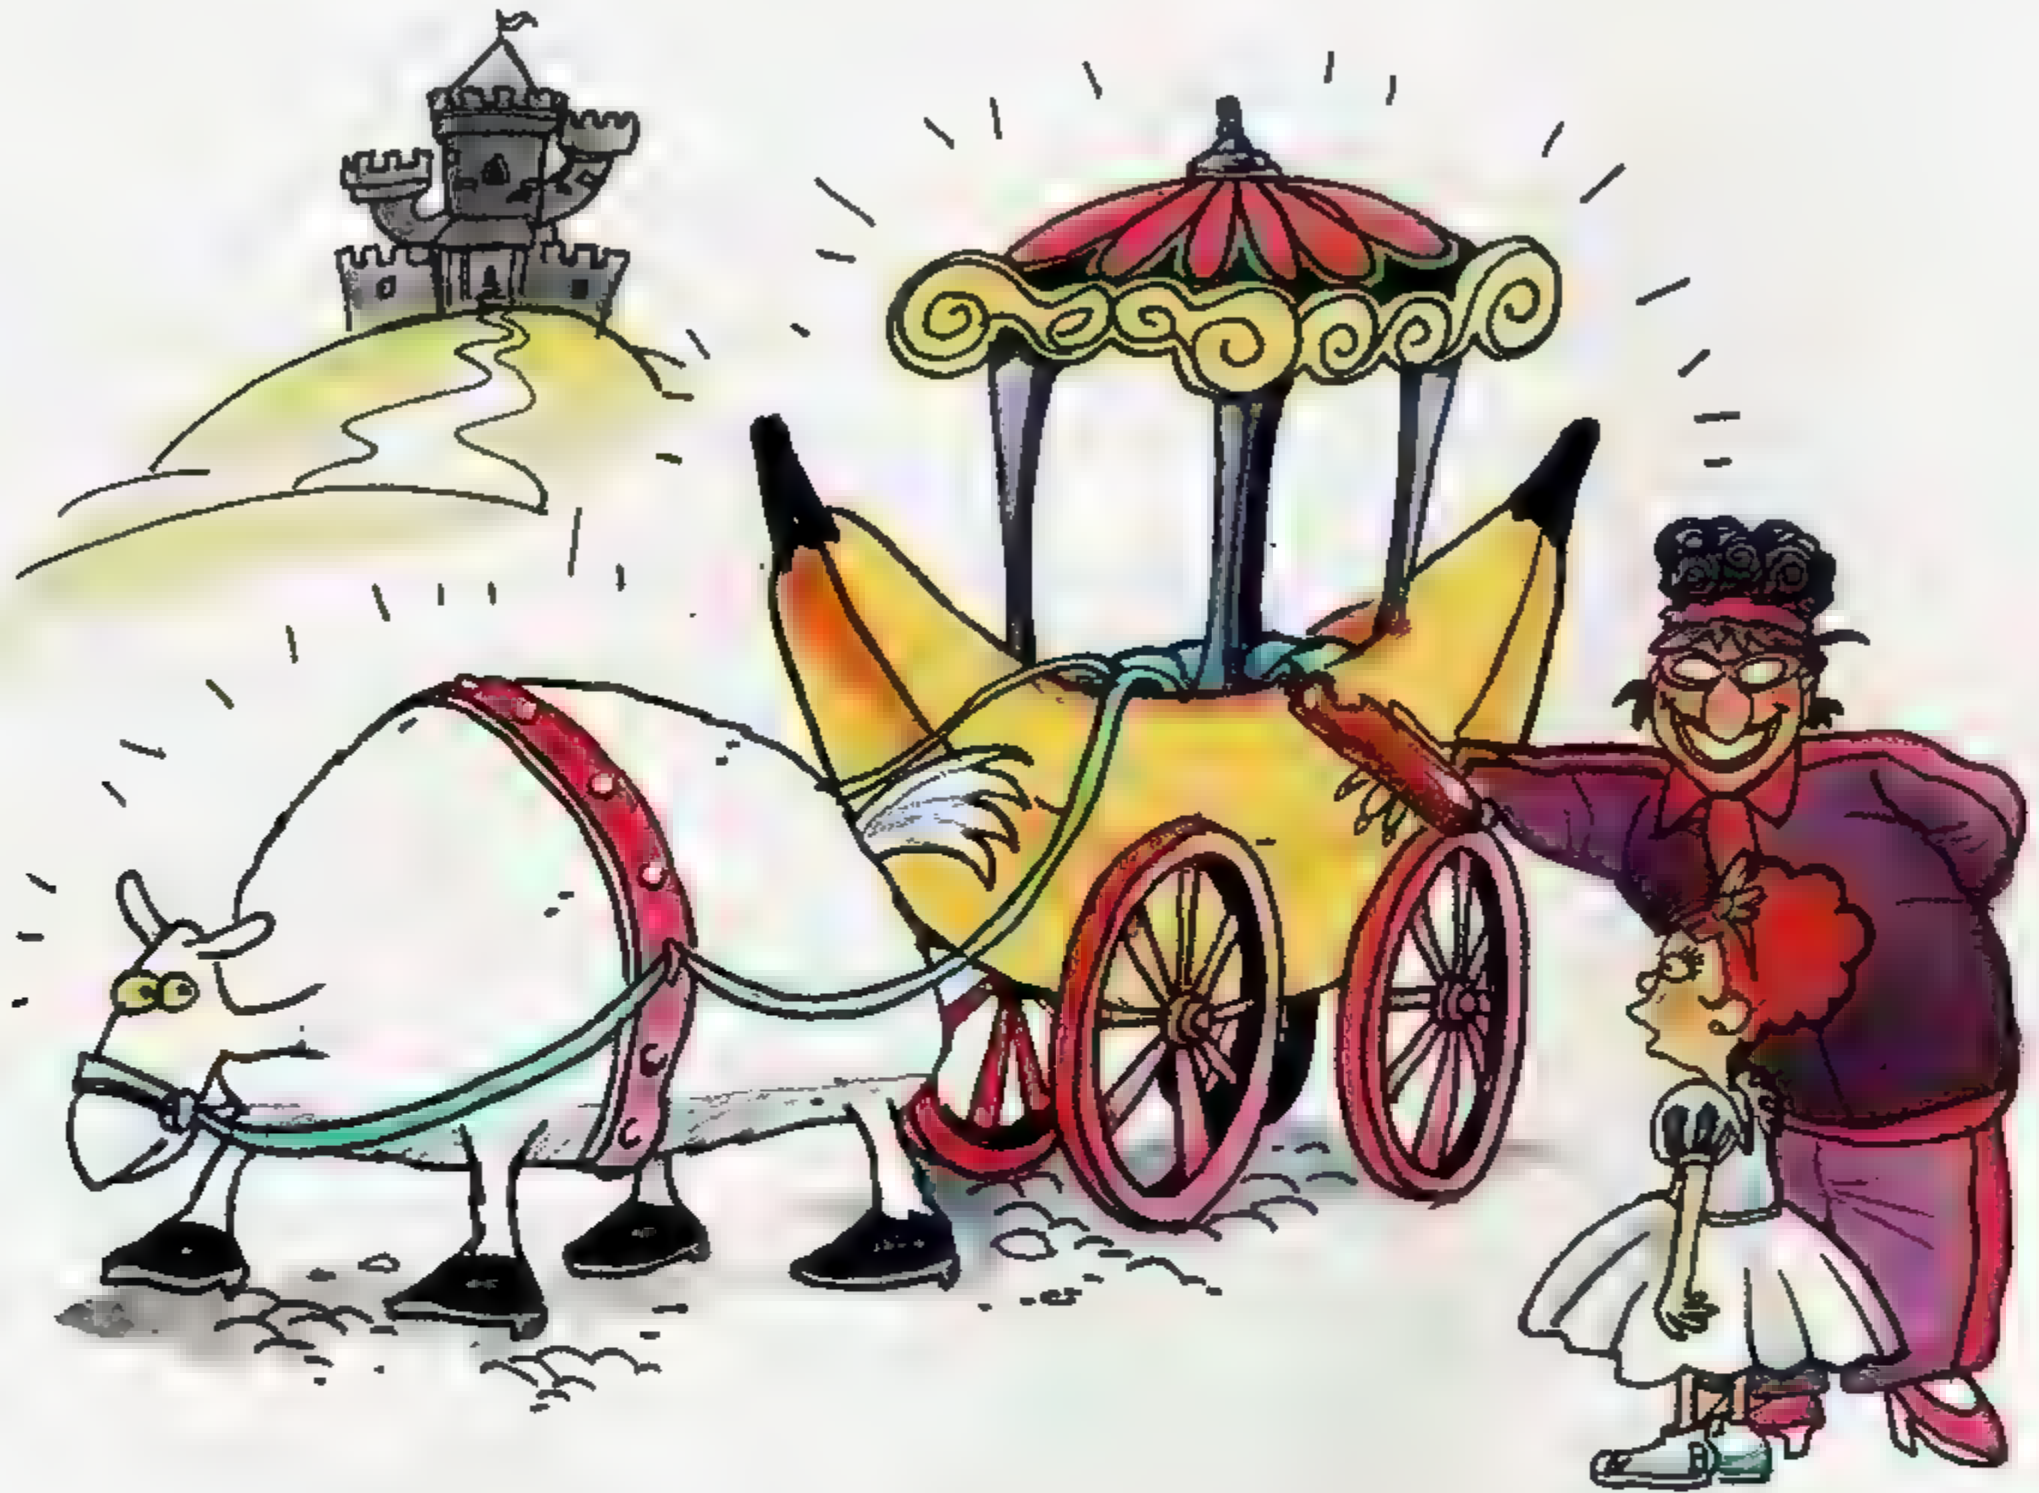

"Okay," said Rhoda, "so where's the pumpkin?" Cindermolly looked at her, bewildered. "I thought you'd bring one." "Oh yeah," said Rhoda, "like I haven't got enough to carry! I'm going to drag around a pumpkin? Look for something else we can use while I try to find my magic wand."

Rhoda began searching through her overstuffed fairy godmother purse. She pulled out a toaster. "Oh good!" she said. "I was looking for that yesterday." Next she pulled out a football ... a waffle iron ... a hair dryer ... and a boom box. "Where is that magic wand?" she said. "Ah, here it is!" She pulled it out of the bag, waved it over Cindermolly. "Wait a minute," Cindermolly said. "That's a salami!" "Don't worry," Rhoda said, "it'll work." And she took a bite out of the salami.

Cindermolly handed her a banana from her school lunch and her pet turtle. "This is all I could find. Can you make something out of these?" she asked hopefully. Rhoda sighed. "Oh boy, I can see it's going to be one of those days. Well, let's give it a try."

She waved her magic salami. The banana and the turtle disappeared. Then she touched Cinder Molly on the top of her head -- and her old egg-stained play clothes were suddenly transformed into a designer gown. Her old gym shoes became glass! "Woo," said Rhoda, "I do good work!" She took another bite from the salami and led an astonished Cinder Molly outside to see her magical carriage.

Cinder Molly stared at the strange vehicle. "Looks a little odd, doesn't it, Rhoda?" "Mof shmof mof shmeef," mumbled Rhoda. "You know you're not supposed to talk with your mouth full," Cinder Molly told her. Rhoda swallowed. "You're right. Now, about the carriage -- it will have to do. You'd better get going -- the party has started!"

Cinder Molly rushed into the banana-coach, and the fat white horse, who had once been a turtle, got moving. Very slo-o-o-owly. "Remember," Rhoda called after her, "ten o'clock, and all this changes back to what it was! Have a good time. I'll explain everything to your parents!" Rhoda waved goodbye as the turtle-coach waddled down the road. Twenty minutes passed -- and Cinder Molly still wasn't to the end of the block!

"This is going to take all night," Cindermolly said. "I'll run the last few blocks!" So she jumped out of the carriage and started to run. She made really good time -- even with glass gym shoes!

She finally arrived at the prince's castle and ran into the castle gym, which had been decorated with streamers and balloons and was just beautiful. Then out of nowhere, she was tapped on the shoulder. She turned ... it was Prince Jason Fogelmeyer! "You want to, like, play video games or something?" he said.

"I don't want to play video games! I'm Cindermolly -- I want to dance!" "I don't think I know how," said Jason. And was he ever right -- he didn't! Everybody started to laugh. Cindermolly liked Prince Jason -- but she was horribly embarrassed.

Suddenly the clock started to strike ten. BONG ... BONG ... BONG ... Prince Jason turned to her. "Phew! Do you smell eggs or something?" Cindermolly looked with horror at her gown. It was starting to change back to her old egg-stained playclothes! "No -- I don't smell anything!" she said quickly. "I just remembered, I've got to, uh, make a phone call! Yeah, that's it!"

Cindermolly pulled away from Jason and started to run.

"Wait, Princess Cindermolly," Jason called after her, "let's dance some more! I think I'm getting the hang of it!"

But Cindermolly was gone. She dashed through the door and out onto the street ... where her carriage had changed back into a banana and the horse back into a turtle. She picked up the poor little out-of-breath turtle and held him as she ran with all her might. Her old gym shoes left behind.

Cindermolly's parents welcomed her back when she returned, because Rhoda had explained everything. They were glad she was safe and sound; they just wanted their daughter to be happy. They knew she wasn't to blame for the food fight. Rhoda had made everybody a nutritious, delicious, low-fat meal.

And as they settled down to eat, there was a knock at the door. Cindermolly opened it, and to her surprise, there was Prince Jason! He was holding up her old gym shoe.

"Did you drop this? Y'know, I think you're the most beautiful girl in school -- no, the world! The universe! With a great personality, and ..."

Suddenly a bell rang. Molly stopped drawing and snapped out of her daydream. Class was over. She walked by Jason's desk very slowly, hoping he'd say something. He looked up at her.

"Hi, Molly," he said. "Are you going to the party on Friday? Molly couldn't believe he was actually talking to her. "Yes," she said, "are you?" "Yeah," said Jason. "Maybe we could dance or something."

Molly froze. "I've got a better idea. You could come over to my house and we could play video games." "Great!" he said, relieved. "I don't really know how to dance anyway." "I know," said Molly. Jason looked at her with surprise.

"What?"

"Uh, nothing," said Molly. "I'll see you Friday."

THE END

Hi,
remember us? We're Lily and Oscar O'Klutz— the art nuts! Today, we'd like to share with you a painting by the French artist, Georges Seurat, born almost 150 years ago. Wow, he'd be older than Mom and Dad! He started sketching when he was seven years old and became famous because of the method in which he painted. It's called, Pointillism, where he used little points [dots] of color to make his paintings. He realized if you painted, for instance, dots of yellow right next to dots of red, you could make orange—without even really mixing the colors!

"Sunday Afternoon on the Island of La Grande Jatte," took Seurat three years to paint!
Doesn't it look like the people are statues—sort of like time has stopped!

See how the yellow and red together make an orange effect?

We started a park
scene for you to finish.
Grab your markers and color in the pictures. Don't forget to add your own drawings as well! Why not draw in Seurat's dotty-style? It's fun and different and you'll see how clever he was to try something unlike anyone else!
